Gas Rationing Like Sugar Will Abolish All 'X' Cards

Coupons to Be Used In New Procedure With Supplemental Supply If Essential

Tighter control of the gasoline rationing program through elimination of the much criticized "X" cards and institution of a rigidly regimented coupon system similar to that used for sugar rationing will become effective before July 15 on the eastern seaboard and in the District, the Office of Price Administration announced last night.

No motorist under the new plan will receive gasoline in excess of what he needs to carry on his work, but all motorists will have a basic ration to provide for household and "other necessary family driving," Price Administrator Henderson said.

How Plan Will Work

The new coupon system will work as follows:

Every motorist will receive an "A" book, containing 48 coupons, enough to drive 2880 miles annually at a rate of 15 miles to the gallon. This figures out to an average basic allotment of slightly under 4 gallons weekly.

Motorists who can prove they need more gas than that provided by the "A" books will receive a "B" book with 16 additional coupons. For those who need still more gasoline than that provided by the "A" and "B" books, there will be "C" books with a maximum of 96 coupons.

Recipients of the "C" books will receive gasoline only for driving in connection with work related to the war effort or to the maintenance of "essential public or civilian services."

Essential Needs Defined

The OPA defined these essential services as "medical care, maintenance of public utilities, carrying farm labor, giving religious comfort or assistance, and making official trips on Government business.

"Only journeys authorized by any Federal, State, local or foreign government for their employes or officials will be considered official trips."

Further restrictions are provided in the order that the "B" and "C" books will be tailored to fit the needs of their holders. Where the motorist may need less gasoline than that provided by either book, coupons

Our New Army

Gen. Marshall Tells How It Grew

CHAPTER XXXII

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

For a month now you have watched an army in the making.

It is your Army, made up of your young men, armed with weapons your genius has conceived and your dollars have paid for, directed by brains nurtured in your land and trained in the kind of warfare you want to fight. You have talked with its men, flown in its airplanes, ridden in its vehicles and fired its guns and you know how good it is.

You have seen that it is being trained to be an aggressive army, to wage offensive warfare on its own initiative and its own terms. You know it will be ready to carry the battle to your enemy, to fly with death and destruction to the industrial heart of his country, to go after his tanks and stop them, to beat him into the earth with its murderous firepower.

That it is learning to do these things you have seen, and you have seen that it has the methods and the means and the teachers it needs to learn them.

You must remember, proud though you may be of your new Army, that all this didn't just happen. Nobody reached up and took this fine young Army of yours down from a Christmas tree.

Of necessity it must have existed in somebody's mind before it became reality. The things you have seen it doing in the pine thickets of North Carolina, in the Florida swamps, in the red hills of Georgia, among Louisiana's stump-ridden meadows, on the plains of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, it had done long before in the imagination of someone able to make his dreams come true.

You know without being told that planning is behind this, and organization and direction. You know that somewhere there must

Doubling the Fleets

A new $8,300,000,000 naval building program, nearly doubling the scope of the two-ocean Navy now on the high seas or rolling off shipways, yesterday was proposed in the House by Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The vast additional naval authorization calls for 500 new warships of 1,900,000 total tonnage, distributed as follows:

Aircraft carriers—500,000 tons.

Cruisers—500,000 tons.

Destroyers and destroyer escort vessels—900,000 tons.

Over and above this combatant ship tonnage, the Secretary of the Navy is authorized in the measure to construct 800 small vessels suitable for use as fast patrol boats, mine vessels and the like.

Supplemental Bill Passed

Vinson dropped the bill in the hopper as the House was approving another $2,806,000,000 in supplemental direct appropriations and contract authority for the Navy.

In the supplemental measure was $887,500,000 for 200,000 tons of submarines, already authorized, and contracts for which, Vinson said, were let yesterday.

In addition, the House provided contract authority for 500,000 tons of naval auxiliary vessels costing $1,115,000,000.

The new auxiliary ship program, increasing to 1,850,000 tons total vessels of this type approved by this Congress, was accepted by the House in advance of action on an authorization bill introduced by Vinson only two days ago.

Apart From Sub Program

The new submarine program provided for more than 125 undersea boats. Like the auxiliary ship increase, this is in addition to the existing two-ocean Navy program, and entirely separate from the big $8,300,000,000 fighting ship measure introduced in the House yesterday.

Vinson said the combined programs "will give us complete dom-

Battered in the West

By the Associated Press

London, June 3.—The R. A. F. bomber command, having kept the war plant city of Essen under two consecutive nights of fire, disclosed today that it is moving steadily toward a goal of 30,000 raiding bombers over Germany each month, an objective it plans to attain by sending out as many as 2000 planes in a single night.

Overnight, British bombers in "very strong" force, but not in the immense strength of the Saturday and Monday night assaults on Cologne and Essen, hammered the Ruhr munitions city and its environs.

Fourteen British bombers were shot down in the raid, a higher percentage of losses than the R. A. F. suffered in the 1000-plane attacks of the previous nights.

U. S. Bombers Help

But hundreds of R. A. F. fighters exacted further revenge today. Sweeping across the Channel, they harried German airdromes, shipping, factories, freight trains and Luftwaffe fighter formations from Holland to Brittany.

In two afternoon sweeps, American-made Boston bombers, escorted by many squadrons of Spitfires, attacked the docks at Cherbourg and Le Havre. Three German fighters were destroyed during the day, and the R. A. F. lost four.

An R. A. F. spokesman, recapitulating the monster Rhine-Ruhr raids which delivered the first blows of the onslaught which is planned, declared Britain already had the organization to send 2000 planes a night against one or more selected targets when that number of craft are available. He said:

"A thousand planes nightly is not the ultimate peak. There is no reason why another thousand should not attack a second target in Germany at the same time, or follow the first thousand onto the same target. A total of 30,000 planes a month bombing Germany is not a fantastic figure."

Fire Bombs Light Way

Airmen returning from the latest attack reported that the Nazi defenses this time were better than on the previous night or at Cologne. On each of those mass raids, according to the commentator, the defenses were "saturated," with the

Damage Slight In 1st Raid; Only News of 2d Attack Is Report at Start

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japanese bombers struck Dutch Harbor a second time yesterday, attacking the key Alaskan outpost with undetermined results six hours after a brief initial raid was repulsed without serious damage.

The Navy announced that the second assault was made at noon (6 p. m. E. W. T.) but gave no details. A communique issued at 9 p. m. said that only one brief report telling of the attack had been received.

Earlier in the day, the Navy disclosed that 4 enemy bombers, escorted by 15 fighters, had raided the air and submarine base located in the Aleutian Islands.

The attack lasted 15 minutes and set a few warehouses afire. There were "but few casualties" and "no serious damage was suffered," the Navy announced.

Then came news of the second raid, arousing speculation that the first assault may have been merely a "feeler" to determine how strong were the defenses of the Dutch Harbor base.

Base Started in 1940

Japan would have no way of acquiring data on the strength of the installations there, as she did regarding Pearl Harbor before December 7. Construction of the base was only started in the fall of 1940, and the work has proceeded in secret.

The small number of bombers employed in the initial raid and the disproportionate size of the fighter escort lent credence to the belief that it was merely a "feeler" and that the second attack may have been much heavier.

Through the night there was no further word from the base to either support or cast down this speculation.

The fragmentary reports did not indicate what damage, if any, was inflicted on the attackers by the base's defense forces

Reprisal for Tokyo Raid

Qualified observers here regard the attacks as partially an effort to avenge the devastating April 18 raid on Tokyo and other Japanese industrial centers and partially to block any American air offensive from the outpost now that warm weather is opening the way for operations in the North Pacific.

Development of the base has been rushed in the last year, and it was

Battle Swirls Savagely Over Libyan Desert

Nazis Break 9-Mile Hole in British Line, But Are Encircled

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 3.—The nine-day battle of Libya tonight became a savage struggle for position and supply on the blazing, swirling sands of the desert, with the score still a destructive stand-off between tanks of British Eighth Army and German African corps.

Two Axis forces, boring toward each other from gaps in the mined and semifortified Ain El Gazala—Bir Hacheim line, ripped out a nine-mile wide hole in the center, to open a better connection with German forces which had withdrawn to the west.

Fighting Front and Rear

At the same time a British column, circling the main field of action, occupied Rotunda Segnali, a rocky enemy stronghold on the Axis supply line 30 miles west of main British positions.

This was the result of these actions:

Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel, in a position to receive fresh supplies from the west German forces which once were east of the Ain El Gazala line, now was turning to fight the British units both north and south of the German breakthrough, which is 12 miles north of Bir Hacheim.

Italians Again Hurled Back

But the British, by seizing the position far to the west, were so harassing the rearward German supply line that Rommel seemed unlikely to be able to maintain reinforcements for his badly broken armored corps.

The captured rock formation of Rotunda Segnali is half way between Ain El Gazala and the German base of Tengeder. It was taken by Allied columns which moved out from the fortified line to stab at German supply columns from the west.

Fighting continued at the same terrific pace in the brown murk of continuous sand storms. These kept air activity to a minimum, although

3 Nipponese Cruisers Corner Ships Off India; 4 Sunk in Atlantic

By the Associated Press

A blasting attack by three Japanese cruisers in the Bay of Bengal off India was revealed by the Navy yesterday to have cost the United Nations seven merchant vessels, one of them a United States ship.

Losses from other areas raised to 11 the toll of Allied ships reported during the day as having been sunk.

News of the Bay of Bengal sinkings April 6 by warships which fired scores of shells at their prey and created a virtual hail of shrapnel above survivors was accompanied by official announcements of the torpedoing of three more vessels in the Atlantic by enemy submarines. The score for the last four days in the Atlantic battleground alone thus reached 12.

British Bomber Appears

At the same time the torpedoing of the British merchantman Charlbury May 28 off the Brazilian coast was reported by 40 survivors who reached Recife.

The skipper of the American ship sunk in the Bay of Bengal, Capt. Ragner Eklund of New York, indicated that the devastation wrought by the Japanese was much greater than the official confirmations. He said the enemy "cleaned out every ship in the bay" or about 18 or 20 ships, in an interview at Norfolk, Va.

Estimating that some 150 seamen perished in the Bay of Bengal action, Eklund said a British bombing plane appeared about an hour after the attack and fired one of the Japanese ships with bombs.

Freighters Return Fire

Seven survivors of the Bay of Bengal action have been landed at Norfolk. The ship's entire crew of 37 escaped on rafts and lifeboats.

Against this picture of continued losses, the Maritime Commission reported American shipyards set an all-time record in May with the completion and delivery of 58 steel merchant ships of approximately 632,000

House Group Votes to Ban All Funds for CCC

Enrollment From Rural Areas Takes Farm Labor, Engel Contends

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday told Congress to liquidate the Civilian Conservation Corps.

By a vote of 15 to 12, it rode down Administration desires by slashing from the Labor-Federal Security appropriation bill all funds for operation of the agency for the 1943 fiscal year.

If the committee's action, taken just before it reported the $1,058,451,660 measure to the House, is sustained by Congress, the Administration will be compelled to dissolve the CCC by June 30 or finance its continuance from whatever unobligated funds may be available to President Roosevelt.

The vote by which the committee turned down its subcommittee's recommendation for $75,818,000 for the CCC after July 1 was initiated by a Republican, Representative Engle of Michigan, but there was plenty of support from Democrats. Six Democrats, including several ranking members of the committee, voted with nine Republicans for

Mason Acts To Combat Hospital Crisis

Meeting Is Called As Lack of Nurses Imperils Services

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Commissioner Guy Mason moved last night to avert the crippling of Washington hospital services by a shortage of nurses that has become critical.

After receiving a pessimistic report late yesterday from Col. N. L. McDiarmid, superintendent of Columbia Hospital, the commissioner immediately scheduled a special meeting in his office tomorrow afternoon of the heads of all hospitals, public and private, in the Capital.

"We've got to work out something," said Mason. "Maybe all of the hospitals will be asked to pool their nursing resources on a cooperative basis, or it may be decided to put the issue up to Federal Security Administrator McNutt as to whether a Federal subsidy would be available to increase salaries of hospital nurses."

One reason for the inadequate supply of hospital nurses is that salaries average only $80 a month. On private duty, they receive $6 per 8-hour day and $9 for 12 hours,

House Votes War Against Balkans Without Debate

By International News Service

Declarations of war against the Axis-dominated nations of Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania were approved unanimously by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate for action expected today.

House members did not debate President Roosevelt's request, made Tuesday, to place the United States on a formal war footing against the three small European countries.

The vote on the resolution declaring war on Bulgaria was 375 to 0, that on Hungary 359 to 0, and on Rumania 361 to 0.

Representative Jeannette Rankin (Republican), of Montana, first woman member of Congress and lone voter against war on Japan, was in New York and so did not vote yesterday.

WPB Relaxes Lumber Order

The War Production Board yesterday relaxed its lumber-freezing order so as to permit completion of approximately 105,000 essential housing units, of which 21,000 are in the metropolitan area here.

Missouri Judge Sits Here

New Criminal Court Opens With 144 Waiting for Trial

With more than 200 persons in District Jail awaiting trial or Grand Jury action, a new criminal court was opened yesterday in District Court under the gavel of a Missouri judge brought here for a one-month session.

Similar action was taken at about the same time last year when two judges were brought in from outside the District to sit with two local judges in an unprecedented move to clear what was then regarded as an overcrowded docket.

In years prior to 1938 there were never more than two criminal courts running at one time. Plans for this summer call for as many as three, and possibly four, courts in session concurrently.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough told The Post late last night that, although there are approximately 200 cases on the docket, there was no danger that the calendar could not be cleared up this month.

Of the 211 present District Jail inmates, 144 are awaiting trial in the criminal courts, according to figures obtained from the Washington Criminal Justice Association. The 67 remaining men are being held for grand jury action.

Presiding over the new court—to be known as Criminal Court No. 4—is U. S. District Judge John Caskie Collet, of the Eastern and Western Districts of Missouri. Judge Collet, former Supreme Court Justice in his home State and member of the Air Corps during the last war, will sit until June 30. He is 44 years old.

Murray Calls Lewis 'Inciter Of Treason, Traitor to Labor'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Having maintained his silence "as long as any human being could," C. I. O. President Philip Murray at last made answer yesterday to a year-long campaign against him by John L. Lewis, denouncing Lewis as a traitor to the labor organization he founded and an inciter of treason against the United States.

Miners "Out" of C. I. O.

Murray's boiling attack, condensing into an hour and a half a bill of particulars dating almost from the hour when Lewis, "with tears in his eyes," beseeched Murray to accept the presidency of the C. I. O., was his first all-out barrage in a war where the issue, he implied, was nothing less than the control of the C. I. O.

His address, made before a cheering meeting of the C. I. O. executive board, concluded with the implication that Lewis' union, the United Mine Workers of America, was temporarily read out of the C. I. O., and cannot return to good standing until it pays its four months arrears in per capita tax to the C. I. O. Lewis has withheld the tax, asking that it be applied as credit to a debt of $1,665,000 which he claims the C. I. O. owes to the miners.

Informed of Murray's speech, Lewis later denied to the Associated Press that he or the miners had opposed any proposal of the Administration for defense before Pearl Harbor or for war since then. He recalled that Murray, speaking to the Mine Workers' policy committee last week, said he "had never questioned John L. Lewis' patriotism." Lewis also denied a Murray charge that Lewis had asked the C. I. O. president to oppose the president's foreign policies and said Murray's speeches indulged in "irrational emotionalism."

Charges Are Itemized

Meanwhile, Martin Wagner, member of the U. M. W. International Board for District 50, announced last night that he had resigned.

In a letter to Lewis, Wagner said he and his constituents could no longer support the policies of the U. M. W. leadership in "attacking the C. I. O., its President Philip

Chinese Battling Savagely To Hold Key Railway Center

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 3.—The fate of the important rail line center of Chuhsien hung precariously in the balance tonight as Japanese troops, in some places less than 10 miles from the city limits, threw in reinforcements in an attempt to close in from three sides upon a fiercely resisting Chinese garrison.

Capture of Chuhsien, in western Chekiang Province 45 miles southwest of the Japanese-occupied provincial capital of Kinhwa, would give the invaders another segment from the 200-mile central section of the Hangchow-Nanchang trunk line. They already hold both terminals.

(The Tokyo radio broadcast Domei dispatches datelined "from the suberbs of Chuhsien" saying the city was aflame from bombing and that Japanese troops had crossed a river three miles from the city limits.)

The Chinese high command said the attack had developed in force since this morning. It reported that the invaders had moved from Kinhwa to positions northeast, east and southeast of the city, testing out its defenses with patrol forays.

With a letup in recent heavy rains, the Japanese launched a full scale assault supported by intensive artillery fire.

46 More Czechs Slain In Reprisal

London, June 3 (AP).—Forty-six more Czechs fell before German firing squads today, bringing the total to 163 in a week of steady executions in reprisal for the shooting of Reinhard Heydrich, Gestapo boss of Czecho-Slovakia, the Nazi-controlled Prague radio announced tonight.

At least 29 women were among those executed—all charged with the attempt on Heydrich's life.

The radio announced 21 had been seven described as Jews, an official of the agriculture ministry and a woman whose husband was a railway controller.

Tonight the Prague "voice of death" announced 25 more had fallen, 15 of them in Prague and 10 in Brunn.

Only a Hollow Shell

New York, June 3 (AP).—The Japanese pavilion on the World's Fair site is now "only a hollow shell" so far has demolition progressed, Park Commissioner Robert Moses yesterday in reply to a group of residents in the neighborhood who had threatened to tear the structure down unless the park department took it away.

"The super-heated group around Flushing Meadow Park (the name now applied to the old Fair Grounds) needn't worry about the demolition of the Japanese building," Moses said, adding that the work was proceeding just as fast as man power and equipment was available.

Dutch Clerics Assail Nazis

London, June 3 (AP).—Leaders of both Protestant and Catholic churches in the Netherlands have circulated throughout the country statements condemning Nazi principles as a threat to religion, the Netherlands news agency, Aneta, said today.

These statements "created a tremendous impression in Holland despite efforts of the Nazi authorities to suppress them," Aneta said.

The Catholic bishops circulated a pastoral letter which was read in churches throughout the country attacking the Nazi-dominated labor service as a great danger to Dutch youth.

Dutch youths compelled to join the labor service were urged to be strong in their faith and to show by their lives that "Christianity is the only force which can reform the world."

The Protestant churches on May 19 read a joint declaration of a general meeting of the Netherlands Reformed Church expressing concern "over the course of events in our country, namely the way the three basic principles of our life—justice, charity and freedom of conscience and conviction—are being violated.'

Report 65 Planes Destroyed, Damaged On Leningrad Front

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 3.—The Russians, heartened by the big British air raids on the Rhineland, have started intensified bombings of German airdromes on the Soviet-German front, dispatches from the battle area said today.

The Nazis, the dispatches declared, have failed to gain the aerial initiative in the east or to produce the long promised clouds of new planes.

Russian bombers destroyed 11 planes on the ground and another trying to take off from an airport on the Leningrad Front, it was reported, while Red fighters downed 40 planes and damaged 13 others on this front.

The midnight Soviet communique also credited Red airmen with sinking two enemy torpedo cutters, damaging three ships, including two transports, inflicting heavy casualties on four Nazi companies, blowing up an ammunition dump, and destroying or damaging a number of German tanks and 40 trucks with troops and supplies on Tuesday.

Local battles rolled along the front, but there were no significant changes, the communique said.

Maj. Gen. Nikolai Zhuravlev declared the air situation was becoming increasingly favorable for the Soviets. The number of flights by the Germans at the front is decreasing and their losses increasing daily, he said.

The Germans, he added, have abandoned the practice of operating in small groups and are flying now in groups of 20 to 30 of which from one-third to a half are fighters.

"Thus the Germans are attempting to compensate for poor skill by sheer numbers," he said.

A large German detachment which penetrated deep within the Red army lines on the Leningrad Front was forced to retreat the Russians said.

In the Kalinin area northwest of Moscow, the Reds claimed to have destroyed three German tanks and four guns, blown up an ammunition dump, wiped out 650 Germans and taken some prisoners.

Ukrainian guerillas mined a railway ahead of a Rumanian troop train and killed more than 300 of the invaders, the Soviet information bureau said.

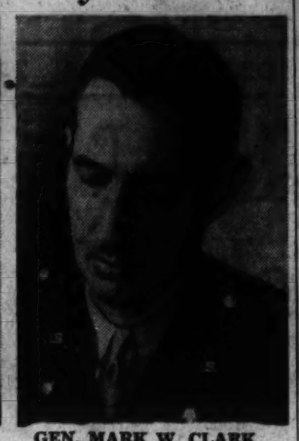
Nazis Claim 2000 Prisoners

Berlin (from German broadcasts), June 3 (AP).—Russian groups encircled by the Germans on the Central Front (west of Moscow) have been crushed by the Nazis with a loss of more than 1500 Russian dead and 2000 prisoners, the German high command reported today.

In a northern sector of the front, the high command said, there was fierce fighting in the swamp region of Volkhovo, a city on the Moscow-Leningrad railroad 80 miles southeast of Leningrad.

General Marshall Tells How America's New Army Grew

GEN. LESLEY J. McNAIR



GEN. MARK W. CLARK

be someone who holds in his hands the controls of this mighty machine, this machine which is building to win your war.

Do you need to be reminded of the long lean years when America was never going to fight a war again, when your Army fed itself on scraps from the Forgotten Man's table, when earnest speakers and writers, steeped in the brotherhood of man, organized into youth movements with peace as their theme the very young men who are now learning to kill for you?

Do you remember the stories and the pictures from the maneuvers at Manassas and Ogdensburg, when skeleton regiments banged away at each other with gaspipe weapons? Do you realize that it was less than two years ago that you really let down the bars and told your Army to go ahead and learn to fight, and even then held back the equipment it needed because you wanted more automobiles and washing machines and electric ice boxes?

A Soldier Built It

You should remember all those things now, because they are part and parcel of the story of your new Army. They are among the material with which a soldier here in Washington has had to build your new Army for you.

He is Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, a soldier as far from the prancing charger and the gold lace and all other military flubdub as a soldier could be. On his chest are ribbons won in battle, as a soldier should win them, and his shoulders bear the four stars of a general. Otherwise General Marshall in his austere office here might be a prosperous farmer keeping books on his harvest or a small business man back in your home town leaning back to pass the time of day with you while he waits for customers to enter his front door.

There are few people in Washington busier that General Marshall. Yet he is a man of such monumental calm, of so great an imperturbability, that you do not feel the pressure of time when you are with him; he has the rare faculty of giving his mind to the thing of the moment as though there were not a thousand other things clamoring for his time and attention.

When you find him you have found the man at the controls, the man in whose mind your new Army lived even before it existed on paper, the man under whose calm eye and hand this stupendous job of organization and equipment and training has been done. He has his own answer and it is typical.

"None of this could have been done," he said yesterday, "without able assistants who knew their jobs and did them. You can make a broken down factory produce with men who know how, but the best plant in the world won't function if its directors don't know their business."

The Army's present method of building new divisions by setting them up in full with raw recruits around veteran cadres, he said, is an excellent example of that principle.

"We had to have a method of training these new divisions," he said, "that would give them to us as quickly as possible without spending the time and about 360 million dollars to build new replacement centers. I gave the dilemma to Maj. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Chief of Staff of the Army Ground Forces, and he gave me the answer.

"He planned how it could be done and Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general of the Ground Forces, saw at once that Clark had the right answer. We lost no time arguing about it and it is working beyond our hopes. The first of those divisions are only four months old and they are months ahead of the progress they could have made by any other method of training."

General Marshall recalled the fall of 1939, when the present expansion of the Army was started, coincidental with his becoming Chief of Staff.

"Since then," he said, "we have had to tear our little Regular Army to tatters to garrison our overseas bases and to provide cadres for the new Army. This process of dilution has not been stopped altogether, but before long we will be big enough and well trained enough to take care of ourselves without disrupting trained organizations to build new ones. The race with time is not over, but time is beginning to work on our side."

He pointed out that building a new Army was not only a matter of recruiting and training new men and acquiring new weapons and equipment. Until recently, he said, there has been a woeful shortage of trained and competent officers.

"You realize," he said, "that we had no corps and Army staffs and very few officers trained in staff duties. We have had to organize these staffs and train these officers and we have accomplished that. Our young reserve officers who came to us by the thousands have been in service a year now and they have got hold of themselves and have become competent. And our officer candidate schools are turning out excellent junior officers equipped for leadership."

Organization of future infantry and armored divisions, General Marshall said, will depend on "future requirements." In other words, armored divisions are not going to be put together just so we can count them up and boast of how many we've got. Infantry divisions, cavalry divisions, field artillery brigades, won't be organized simply because men and equipment exist with which to organize them.

Your new Army is a tailored Army, cut to fit the job it is going to do. That job, General Marshall assured the Nation at West Point last Friday, will be to carry the war to the enemy wherever he may be found.

It is in safe hands, this new Army of yours. There has been a ruthlessness in ridding it of deadwood that few civilians and not all soldiers understand. Officers who have devoted their lives to the profession of arms have been shifted or retired because of age or because they did not show they had the stuff to win battles. Young men, keen in their profession and imbued with modern doctrine, have come to the top.

The hallowed organization of the War Department has been tossed out the window and a streamlined organization of Ground, Air and Supply forces, each commanded by a general officer who had demonstrated his capacity for getting things done, has been substituted. The Army in the field has been streamlined for efficiency and firepower and mobility. Your new Army is a modern Army from the top down.

Battle Swirls Savagely Over Libyan Desert

the British managed to bomb some of the enemy mechanized units north of Bir Hacheim.

Rommel's Italian allies tried a second attack on Bir Hacheim, only to be thrown back again by the Free French defenders, whom the British now call the "fighting French."

All this created the second phase of the greatest battle yet fought in the African sands. The first phase ended when the Germans failed in their attempt to knock out the British armor—largely because of the fire-power of the 28-ton "General Grant" tanks from the United States—and fell short of their primary goal, capture of Tobruk.

They withdrew from a furious tank battle at Knightsbridge, 15 miles southwest of Tobruk, and part of the enemy forced their way westward through two slits in the Gazala line.

The remainder, remaining east of the line, then knocked out the 9-mile hole in the center of the British defenses.

tance.

The Chinese communique said fighting also continued on the Kiangsi and Kwangtun Province fronts southwest of Chekiang, and in Hupeh Province along the Yangtze River to the west.

In Kiangsi, Japanese troops attacking from the Nanchang terminus of the railroad in an attempt to cut off the Chuhsien sector, were reported repulsed for a second consecutive day in fighting near Tsinsien and Likiatu, southwest of Nanchang.

Japs Pay Dearly For Landing

Also met with stiff resistance, the Chinese declared, were Japanese forces which landed near Tuchang on the east shore of Poyang Lake north of Nanchang The Chinese said they sank 40 to 50 steam launches packed with Japanese soldiers.

The war report said the Japanese also had attempted to gain another foothold in southeastern Chekiang Province by forcing a landing under cover of gunboats along the coast northeast of Wenchow, near Huhwan Island, but withdrew with heavy losses.

Chinese troops apparently still had the initiative in Hupeh Province where the Japanese-occupied town of Shansi has been under attack since last Friday.

RAF Goal—30,000 Raiders Monthly

"German antiaircraft guns and searchlights unable to concentrate effectively on the vast number of attacking aircraft."

Similarly the fire services and air raid precaution workers were "overwhelmed" by the torrents of incendiary bombs which lit the way for the bombers.

The R. A. F. spokesman said he doubted that casualties in the Ruhr area had reached five figures, since the Germans are believed long since to have evacuated nonessential persons and to have built extensive underground shelters.

To illustrate the power of the offensive, these figures were given out in resume:

A total of 1130 planes over Cologne Saturday night, 1036 over the Essen vicinity on Monday night, more than 1000 over France and the Channel area during Monday in the intermission between the Cologne and Essen visitations, more than 200 Spitfires, some escorting Hurricane bombers, in sweeps over occupied France this afternoon.

The Germans for their part were active over night over southwest England, but it was stated here that they operaed only in small numbers, setting off minor fires and causing some casualties and damage.

Berlin broadcasts said the old cathedral city of Canterbury again was the main Nazi target, that 10,000 incendiaries, aside from heavy explosive bombs were dropped there. It was claimed that during Tuesday 20 British planes were shot down by Nazi defenders and that over Tuesday night 14 British bombers were destroyed. A later German broadcast said 24 British raiders were shot down today.

"Considerable damage by fire" in western Germany was acknowledged by the German high command.

As the day brought from Moscow evidence that the Russian people, no less than the British public, are profoundly proud of the success of the British offensive, the R. A. F. commentator noted that American delvieries to Britain had declined recently because planes were being held in the United States to accommodate "the large number of trained pilots" becoming available there.

He added that Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States Army Air Force, and his staff have been reviewing "the original promises of aircraft delivery made before the United States entered the war," and that "it will work out well in the long run, for the American Army Air Force will be in action with us, wing to wing, before long."

Germans Over England

An English South Coast Town, (Thursday), June 4 (AP).—German planes attacked south coastal areas early today, causing some casualties and property damage.

A. V. G. Score—28 to 6

Chungking, June 3 (AP).—The American Volunteer Group's "Flying Tigers" were reported officially today to have destroyed from 28 to 32 Japanese planes and made 12 major attacks while losing only six aircraft to maintain their brilliant record aloft during May.

The Kunming-based fighters, who are to be absorbed by United States Air Forces next month, destroyed 24 Japanese fighters, three scouters and a bomber and damaged 39 planes, four probably fatally.

Copper, Steel Lack May Halt Some Jobs

Greater Shortages Seen by Batt, Though War Goal Is Assured

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Staff Writer

Some ammunition lines may have to shut down in 1942 and 1943 because of the copper shortage.

Some shipways, which should be building bottoms to haul weapons from the arsenal of democracy to the fighting front, may stand idle for lack of steel plates.

The 10-million-ton steel expansion program will be cut 30 to 35 per cent because of the scarcity of metal to build the new plants.

Industry must "patch and pray" to keep existing machinery going, because new parts and replacements will be hard to get.

Won't Miss Production Goals

This startling picture was presented yesterday by William L. Batt, chairman of the War Production Board's Requirements Committee, at a press conference which made it plain that the swiftly expanding arms production program was nearing the point of running headon into serious shortages of critical materials.

"I think there is no doubt," Batt said, "that in 1942 and 1943 there will be times when we may find a shipyard here or there—temporarily I hope—down for lack of materials, and ammunition lines down for lack of copper and brass."

Batt did not say that production would fall short of the President's "blueprint for victory" goals, and his associates later said emphatically he did not mean to imply this.

These officials amplified Batt's report by disclosing that some ammunition lines might suffer interruptions "shortly," shipways "eventually," and that some gun output already had been hurt while other ordnance plants are in excellent shape. A brighter outlook for planes and tanks was pictured by these sources: planes because the aluminum picture has brightened appreciably, and tanks because production already has hit a volume heavy enough to obviate concern.

More Civilian Sacrifice

The materials shortage will become increasingly severe as the war goes on, Batt said, in spite of WPB programs for exploiting low grade domestic ores, paying premium prices for copper, lead and zinc, and building new Federally financed plants.

The civilian economy is about to go on a "minimum subsistence standard," Batt said, pointing out that past months have been "relatively easy."

The "military has taken from the civilian to meet its needs. This pool is nearly dry. From here on out it will be a continuous problem to provide materials to meet the needs of our fighting forces. Industry must get ready to 'patch and pray' to keep existing equipment at work."

The pinch is tightest, officials said in a prepared statement, in alloying metals used to make armor plate and high speed tool steels.

Summary of Situation

A review of the metals situation was given, which showed, in brief:

Nickel—"We do not have enough nickel to fill all demands. The housewife will not have stainless steel kitchenware but our soldiers and sailors will have first-class weapons."

Aluminum—"Particularly tight, but not as bad as it was."

Copper—"We are uncomfortably short of copper, but the figures can not be given out for military reasons."

Manganese—Development of low-grade domestic manganese now under way "will supply us with our needs."

Chromium—"We are developing in Montana new sources from low-grade ores while not of a quality that will fill all our needs it will fill a number of them."

Tungsten—A broad program of domestic tungsten production, centering in Idaho, Utah, California, and Nevada, as well as increases in Latin-American production, will fill much of the gap caused by stoppage of shipments from the Far East, but this metal still is "a major problem."

Tass Reports Subordinate War Role Irks Italians

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 3.—A Tass news agency dispatch from Geneva reported today that a letter complaining against the "undignified" subordination of the Italian general staff to the German command has been written to King Vittorio Emanuele by Italian Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio and is being widely circulated among high Italian officers.

Marshal Badoglio was chief of the Italian general staff for 15 years before his resignation was announced December 6, 1940, during the Italian-Greek war.

(Little has been heard of the warrior since his resignation but a report in Bern, Switzerland, to the New York Times only last April said Badoglio was known in Rome as the "official opponent" of Premier Mussolini.)

Tass' report quoted Badoglio's letter as expressing regret at the present situation of the Italian general staff.

Badoglio was said to have pointed out that as a result of what he called the "cooperation" between the Axis armed forces, Italian staff officers virtually were denied the possibility of planning independently their operations on the Mediterranean fronts.

The news agency report said Badoglio declared the Italian army has its own traditions and its own strategic principles but under the present situation the Italian armed forces could not follow these traditions and principles.

It was said that, according to Badoglio, many Italian high officers share his opinion that such a state of affairs may lead to the "degeneration of the Italian army."

British Drive Southward In Madagascar

By the Associated Press

Vichy, June 3.—British forces on Madagascar have occupied the town of Androvorano, 25 miles south of the British-occupied naval base of Diego Suarez, it was announced today.

The French said troop movements had been resumed on Madagascar, about a month after the British captured the naval base at the northern end of the huge island.

The announcement was the first indication in Vichy that the British again were advancing southward, although reports reached here yesterday of resumed activity accompanied by increased air action by both sides.

There was no fighting mentioned in the reported occupation, although details still were lacking and there was a possibility of military resistance.

It was the first definite report of British progress since the capture of Diego Suarez.

Capital Reported Bombed

London, June 3 (AP).—The Paris radio reported today from Madagascar that British planes had bombed Tananarive, the island capital, and the town of Majunga.

Majunga is a costal town about 300 miles southwest of Diego Suarez, now occupied by the British. The captial city lies about 400 miles directly south and inland.

Britain Takes Over Mines, Prepares for Coal Rationing

By the Associated Press

London, June 3.—The British Government took over complete control of the nation's coal mines today and announced a fuel rationing for homes, business and factories to be imposed by July 1 unless there is a sharp voluntary reduction in the use of fuel.

Mine owners are to retain ownership and are to be paid £68,450,000 ($265,800,000) as compensation.

A rationing basis of 840 pounds of coal a year per person was proposed, but it was made clear that any rationing for households would take into consideration the locality of the home and the number of rooms and occupants.

A new ministry of fuel, light and power was created to control the coal industry and administer the rationing and Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, son of the Welsh Prime Minister of the last war, was named head of the new ministry and given cabinet rank.

William Mabane, former parliamentary secretary in the ministry of home security, will succeed Lloyd George as parliamentary secretary, ministry of food.

The new ministry will assume all the government's functions in relation to the production and consumption of fuel and power, with the special task of administering the rationing plan.

The new ministry also assumes charge of all petroleum control from the board of trade. It absorbs the old ministry of mines, and thereby it head, Laborite David R. Grenfeld, is dropped from the government.

Rationing of electricity is to be undertaken September 1, and the government is to buy all milk from producers in the future and control its distribution.

Railways in Britain already are operated by the government under wartime regulations. The government pays the owners rent.

10 Killed in Crashes of 3 Army Planes

The death of 11 persons in four Army plane crashes was revealed by military authorities Wednesday.

Six men were killed when a B-25 medium bomber crashed near Mobile. The ship, from Key Field, Miss., was piloted by Lieut. Emmett F. Rogue.

Authorities at March Field, Calif., announced the finding of the wreckage of a plane, missing since last Friday. Killed when the ship crashed into a hillside were Maj. J. P. Stewart of Riverside, Calif., and Staff Sergts. Carl L. Lewis, Carmel, Calif., and Thomas Noble, Derby, Colo.

Salinas, Calif., Army air base officials announced the death of Lieut. David B. Henderson, 21, of Norwood, N. C., who was killed Tuesday night when the ship he was piloting crashed 3 miles west of Salinas.

Veireck Linked Anew to Agents Probe; Silver Shirter Quizzed

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle's offensive against treason and sedition hammered ahead on three fronts yesterday, with hints of sensational developments in a few days.

1. There was evidence that threads from the web of subversive publications being scrutinized by the special grand jury on Axis agents ran back to George Sylvester Viereck, the Nazi master agent jailed here several months ago.

2. George W. Christians—the "Soci" agent who is the defendant in the first sedition trial of the war—squirmed under cross-examination in the Chattanooga, Tenn., Federal court.

3. The Silver Shirter, William Dudley Pelly, arrested on a warrant charging sedition some weeks ago, was being studied by the Federal grand jury at Indianapolis.

Viereck was sentenced to two to six years in prison, upon conviction of violation of the Foreign Agents Act, and his prosecutors turned their guns on a scattered group of defeatist papers and organizations suspected of enemy financing, inspiration or control.

Brought eventually before the grand jurors was Pelley's lawyer, H. Victor Broenstepp—also known as Lieut. Gen. V. Cherup-Spirodovitch and the Duke St. Zeba—who set out a year ago to coordinate the policies of the defeatist papers under investigation. Broenstepp was concerned over their equipment, too, and admited to reporters that at one time he undertook to get a new linotype for Publicity, the Wichita, Kans., weekly suppressed after its editor and publisher were indicted for conspiracy and sedition.

Prosecutor William Power Maloney was making investigations yesterday in New York, headquarters of Broenstepp, Viereck and the pro-Nazi Jew-baiter, Edward James Smythe.

Viereck's Washington agent was Prescott Dennett. After the current inquiry had gone several weeks, Dennett was called back before the grand jury and he was questioned at the Department of Justice this week by Special Prosecutors John T. M. Reddan and Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., United States Navy (j. g.)

A second Washington agent of Viereck was Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, who supplied the Nazi organization with tons of franked propaganda. The Post learned that he was recently interviewed again by the prosecutors. Convicted of perjury, Hill is at Lorton Penitentiary.

Hailed before the grand jurors weeks ago was the chief of the "Socis"—Social Republic Society—a California agitator named David Baxter, whose secret, armed, bands hope to seize control of this country when a revolution comes.

Baxter's aide, Christians, also was in the revolution business on his own account, as head of the Crusader Silver Shirts. Indicted for sending inflammatory propaganda to soldiers, Christians went on trial in Chattanooga Monday, before Federal Judge Leslie Darr.

Confronted with his "warnings" of a "reign of terror" and "the flames of anarchy" which the nation would suffer unless his money scheme were adopted, Christians said he never intended to cause any trouble.

Nor, he protested, did he intend to hurt Army morale, with his propaganda that the Axis powers were victims of a financial dictatorship.

"You're supposed to have a sense of humor," the "Soci" agent told United States Attorney J. B. Frazier, jr.

Vinson Seeks 500 Ships to Double Navy

intatio nof the ocean and of the air."

He declined to deal with specific numbers in each category, which are military secrets. Before the war, the Navy had nearly 700 warships built or building. In December, Congress rushed through authorizations for another 150,000 tons, providing more than 20 additional ships of all types except battleships. The new Vinson program, plus the more than 125 submarines for which funds were cleared yesterday, enlarges the program by at least 625 fighting ships, not including the many hundreds more patrol boats and auxiliary craft sought.

Although cruisers were included, no additional battlehips were slated, and the program highlighted the new emphasis given to aircraft carriers to throw fighting planes across both oceans, and swift lighter surface ships that can be built with speed.

Vinson said the present two-ocean program will be completed inside of 24 months. The vast additional authorizations will permit the Navy to lay keels of ever more fighting vessels as rapidly as shipways are vacated.

The bill introduced yesterday gives the Navy discretion to vary upward or downward by 30 per cent the tonnages in each category, within the over-all 1,900,000 ton limit, so the Navy may shift to the types most needed as the war progresses.

Inclusion of $1,115,000,000 for 500,000 more tons of auxiliary ships in the naval supplemental bill passed yesterday by the House, came at Vinson's request, after the committee had suspended judgment pending passage of an authorization measure.

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee told the House that the Budget Bureau had submitted the necessary estimates and "these ships are greatly needed to supplement the 200,000 tons of submarines already in the bill."

It was the second time in recent months that the House had approved a war appropriation in advance of legislative authority. The authorization bill was approved by the House Naval Committee only Tuesday. Their report filed yesterday said that "if the war continues, it will be necessary for the Navy to seek further auxiliary ships" in addition to the 500,000-ton increase asked in the bill.

"The committee is convinced that it is vital to provide this authorization in order that the procedure capacity of all shipbuilding facilities may be continuously utilized to the fullest extent during the present war," said the report.

The report revealed that contractual obligations for auxiliary vessels already totaling 1,411,36 tons exceed congressional authority thereof by 61,306 tons. The committee said this was due to an "executive directive to proceed immediately with the construction of a particular type of vessel, the early obtaining of which is of paramount importance."

The naval supplemental bill passed yesterday also provided 150 million dollars for aviation plant facilities, 313 million dollars to provide for increases in Navy and Marine Corps personnel and a 200 million dollars increase in the Navy's revolving fund for procurement of stores.

Also provided was $16,760,000 to build new ships for the Coast Guard, $20,780,000 for port security work, 15 million dollars for defense installations on merchant vessels and 48 million dollars for training merchant marine personnel.

CCC's abolition.

In the closed session in which the committee acted, it was learned, Engel argued that in recent months CCC has been drawing heavily for its enrollees from farming communities where shortages of agricultural labor already constitute a threat to the "food for victory" program.

For months CCC, established in the depth of the depression nine years ago and one of the most popular of New Deal agencies, has been marked for elimination by legislators advocating reductions in non-defense spending.

Similarly, the National Youth Administration has been under attack, but a motion for NYA's liquidation, offered by Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, ranking minority member, was defeated in committee, reportedly by a wide margin.

As the House began debate on the bill which appropriates for the Labor Department and the Federal Security Agency for the next fiscal year, Representative Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia served notice that he would move to restore the CCC funds by amendment from the floor.

"This organization has been the greatest contribution of this Administration," Tarver told the House in arguing that the CCC should be retained so that the Government will have ready an agency equipped to absorb unemployment after the war.

Tarver received support from Representative Cochran (Democrat) of Missouri.

10,795 On CCC Payroll

Anticipating an executive order from President Roosevelt, known to be under consideration, merging CCC and NYA, the subcommittee had written into the bill a provision which would have required the President to ask Congress for funds to operate the merged agencies. This provision was stricken out by the full committee in view of its elimination of CCC funds.

The committee, however, left in the bill language authorizing CCC Director James J. McEntee to turn over CCC camp buildings to Federal, State and local governments or to nonprofit organizations provided the Army or Navy indicate they have no use for them.

Aside from its enrollees, CCC provides employment for 10,795 civilian workers, of which 650 work in Washington.

In the nine years of its existence, the agency has spent $2,800,000,000 on the training of three million persons. It reached its peak enrollment of 520,000 in 1935. The agency once operated 2652 camps, but now has charge of about 400 and expects to leave unexpended on June 30 about 105 million dollars of its 1942 appropriation.

For 1942, Congress gave the CCC 246 million dollars, as contrasted with the $75,818,000 recommended by the subcommittee.

Other Reductions Urged

The bill the full committee sent to the House recommended sharp reductions in the peacetime operations of Federal Security and the Labor Department. The total was $202,587,838 less than 1942 appropriations and $99,642,081 below President Roosevelt's budget estimates. Recommended for the Labor Department was $23,715,930; for Federal Security, $821,298,140, for employes compensation, $9,589,705, and the National Labor Relations Board, $3,600,470.

Although approving $53,049,000 for NYA training of war workers and adding five million dollars for perpetuation of its student-aid program, the committee took pains to write into the bill a limitation on NYA's authority for the purpose of preventing it from duplicating training programs of the Office of Education. The committee also voted to require candidates for NYA training to sign an agreement to accept employment in a war industry.

Aleutians Rough Invasion Path

By the Associated Press

The volcanic, fog-bound Aleutian Islands, stretching westward from Alaska like a string of beads, would prove an inhospitable pathway for invasion if the Japanese should seek to move that way in any greater force than the isolated air raid carried out at Dutch Harbor yesterday.

A large section of the Japanese navy which has been assigned each year to protect the big fishing fleets is doubtless well acquainted with the waters thereabouts, and prospective landing places may have been plotted.

But the island chain separating the Bering Sea and the North Pacific, 2000 miles long with the inclusion of the Alaska Peninsula, is a desolate area with hundreds of active or semiactive volcanoes, and the birthplace of fierce Pacific storms.

So inhospitable is the region that unusual measures have had to be taken to make it habitable for the men of the United States Military Forces now garrisoned at the new bases there.

The Federal Government took over the area embracing Dutch Harbor on June 5, 1930 for probable military and naval establishment purposes.

The last prewar report on progress in that area by the Navy was issued last October 17. It said that "exceptional speed was made in the development of Alaskan air bases at Sitka, Kodiak and Dutch Harbor."

formally commissioned last September 1 under the command of Comdr. W. N. Updegraft. An Army camp, Fort Mears, was set up near the naval base at Dutch Harbor. Both installations are on the island of Unalaska, one of the Aleutian chain.

While the island has one of the best harbors of the Pacific, capable of holding the entire United States Fleet, the weather in the long winter greatly limits its use. Fog and strong winds make flying difficult even through the open summer months.

Japan, however, has looked upon the growing naval base as a dagger pointed directly at her, from which bombers could be sent at her cities and perhaps fleets launched against her coasts.

Raids Long Expected

Alaska, therefore, has long expected an aerial attack, not only directed against Dutch Harbor, but against the other air and naval bases, Anchorage, Sitka and Kodiak. The latter, close to the mainland of Alaska, has been developed as the major naval station in the territory.

Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska yesterday called upon all civilian defense units in the territory to be on the alert following the first raid on outlying base.

"An anticipated air raid on Alaska began this morning with an attack by Jap planes on Dutch Harbor," he stated. "Our Army and Navy are rendering an excellent account of themselves."

There was a report that Ketchikan, a fishing center on the panhandle of Alaska 1200 miles from Dutch Harbor, had an air-raid alert about an hour after the attack on the outpost, but before it had been announced by the Navy.

U. S. Navy Photo

CAPT. GOULD P. GROVES, a native of Altheimer, Ark., is in command of the Marine Corps detachment at Dutch Harbor, which was raided yesterday by Jap planes Capt. Groves' family formerly lived here in Lanier Place Northwest

All through the Pacific area Army and Navy posts were keyed for a possible attack.

Dutch Harbor is a naval air and submarine base situated far out in the Aleutian Island chain, running along the shortest route from Seattle to Tokyo. It is 2547 miles from Yokohoma and only about 1400 miles from the Kuril Islands, northernmost Japanese island chain.

Authorities here believe the raid must have been launched from an aircraft carrier, because fighter planes could not make the hop from probable bases in the Kurils and return.

Dutch Harbor's defense forces—presumably including antiaircraft batteries, fighter planes and aircraft warning service—were not caught napping.

Rear Admiral Charles S. Freeman, commander of the Northwest Sea Frontier and the Thirteenth Naval District which includes Alaska, said at Seattle:

"This attack was not a surprise and the station was prepared to meet it. Further reports may be expected from the Navy Department when further news as to the extent and severity of the attack is received."

The Japanese are still smarting under the Army bomber raid on Tokyo and other Japanese industrial centers several weeks ago.

The aerial attack on Dutch Harbor was the first on American soil since the Philippines fell. But attacks even on the United States mainland have been predicted by high officials here.

Only last week Secretary of War Stimson declared that attacks on the West Coast were apparently inevitable because the Japanese may be expecti to try to sav face lost in the Tokyo raid.

Seattle Issues Warning

Seattle, June 3 (AP).—Japan's aerial attacks on Dutch Harbor, Alaska, brought a warning from civilian defense leaders today for Seattle's citizenry to re-check air raid instructions and prepare their homes for possible blackout.

British Commando, Supply Chiefs Here

By Michael Chinigo
International News Service Staff Writer

Master plans to speed Axis defeat began to take definite shape yesterday in a series of momentous American-British-Russian parleys highlighted by Soviet pressure for creation of a western European "diversion" front this summer.

Key figures in current Washington discussions which spell sad surprises for both Hitler and Hirohito are Britain's Minister of Production Oliver Lyttelton, and colorful Commando Chief Lord Louis Mountbatten.

British spokesmen followed the announcement of Lyttelton's arrival with the disclosure that his mission would be "primarily" aimed toward further welding American-British production schedules to raise the present output of war weapons in keeping with increasing demands on the world's far-flung battlefronts.

Merchantmen Discussed

The question of speeding merchant ship launchings, it was admitted, will be given primary importance because it constitutes one of the United Nations outstanding worries of the moment.

Accompanied by Sir Walter Layton, chief adviser on programs and planning in the ministry of production, and representatives of the British ministry of defense and department of supply, Lyttelton plunged immediately into a series of conferences with top-ranking American officials, outstanding among which was a lengthy late afternoon session with War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson.

An official of the British supply council said that Lyttelton's "jammed" schedule calls for talks with Harry Hopkins, chairman of the Anglo-American Munitions Allocations Board, and a visit to Detroit on Saturday.

Closeted with America's top military officials in the War Department, Mountbatten was believed by military experts to be drafting plans for joint American-British commando action as a softening up process of Europe's west coasts before a full-scale invasion is attempted.

Arnold Back from London

Lending weight to this belief was a War Department communication announcing the return from London of Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, and his aides following discussions for America's participation in the air war against the Axis.

While the personalities involved in these discussions and the locale at which they are taking place were kept closely guarded secrets, it became known that momentous decisions were being provoked by Soviet pressure for the opening of a second front in western Europe this summer.

Arriving here yesterday morning, Mountbatten conferred immediately with Maj. Gen. F. G. Beaumont-Nesbitt, British military attache and member of the British-American combined staffs. In the afternoon, he met Secretary of War Stimson, Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, and Gen. Lesley McNair, chief of U. S. Ground Forces. Later he made an overnight trip to New York.

Spy Suspect Sent Ship Data, Court Is Told

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 3.—"Queen Mary on way to Australia . . ."

That was the translation of a message her husband sent to a man in Sweden, Mrs. Frances Goellert Gros said in a statement which the prosecution introduced at their trial in Federal Court today.

Dr. Hans Helmut Gros, 34, his wife, 31, and Albrecht Rudolf Curt Reuter, 56, former art dealer, have been on trial accused of espionage but Reuter was freed as the prosecution rested today.

"We do not convict people on suspicion alone," Federal Judge Ben Harrison stated as he ordered the charge dismissed. Reuter's name hardly had been mentioned at the trial.

The three were charged with failure to register as German agents and conspiring to transmit to Germany information concerning national defense preparations.

Mrs. Gros told of pressing her husband for details of a coded cablegram, continuing:

"I finally got a translation from him and he said it meant 'Queen Mary on way to Australia.' The code was made up of a mixture of words from the Latin, Russian, German, Italian, Czecho-Slovakian and Rumanian languages."

The Queen Mary, a British liner, is one of the largest vessels afloat. The date when the cablegram was dispatched was not mentioned.

The Minneapolis-born Dr. Gros, in a statement read yesterday by a FBI agent and described by the prosecution as a confession of his activities, told of his employment by the German intelligence at $200 a month, plus a 20,000-mark bonus.

But he declared he never worked very hard at the job.

Dr. Gros said in the confession that the recently wounded Reinhard Heydrich, No. 2 man of the German Gestapo and his former schoolmate in Saxonia, had instructed him to:

"Organize sabotage, the blowing up of ships, industrial plants and such things.

"Take photographs of harbors and military objectives.

"Furnish information on persons who might be contacted to create strikes."

Navy Develops Super Motor For Aircraft

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

In an announcement foretelling a revolutionary change in naval aircraft design, the Navy disclosed yesterday development of a huge new liquid-cooled aviation engine approaching 2000 horsepower.

If the Navy's use of this extraordinary power plant follows the same general line of airplane construction adopted by the Army with liquid-cooled engines, then a new series of naval fighter craft, faster and more powerful than any now on first line duty, is in the making.

Perform Brilliantly

With liquid-cooled motors, the Army developed the P-40s, which have performed brilliantly in battle from England to Australia; the speedy new P-39, or Bell Airacobra; the twin-tailed P-38 and the P-51, a "mystery" fighter.

he Navy has built up its carrier-based fighter plane force almost exclusively on air-cooled engines. The best of these now produce between 1000 and 1200 horsepower, while some of the Army pursuit planes are reported to exceed this figure.

The formal announcement that the new engine had been completed and placed on contracts described it only as "considerably larger than any other liquid-cooled aircraft engine now in production," with power sufficiently great "as to compare favorably with that of the largest-type aircraft engine presently in use."

The largest known air-cooled aircraft engines now used by the Navy are the 2000-horsepower units placed on the giant flying boat Mars.

Long-Standing Argument

The argument between advocates of liquid-cooled and radial engines is of long standing. Chief relative merits claimed for the two types are the liquid-cooled engine presents a smaller frontal area permitting the designing of smaller fuselages—a great advantage in high-speed fighters, while the air-cooled engine turns up greater power in relation to its weight.

The Army recently has favored liquid-cooled plants, with one notable exception, and the Navy has concentrated on radial plants. The Army exception is the new P-47, about which little is known except that it uses a radial engine reported to turn up about 2000-horsepower.

Japs Sink 7 Ships In Bay of Bengal

The Navy announced during May the sinking of 31 American-ships of an undisclosed aggregate tonnage.

One of the Atlantic sinkings was a medium-sized United States merchant vessel, which was torpedoed early last month along with a large British ship in the Caribbean area. All the 83 crewmen and eight passengers of the two ships escaped death.

Thirty-three survivors landed at eastern ports from the third torpedoed ship, a medium-sized British merchantman, sunk several hundred miles east of Bermuda.

Concerning the Bay of Bengal battle, Captain Elkund said six Allied Nations cargo ships were cornered by the cruisers and the entire group was shelled to the bottow in 40 minutes. A nearby Norwegian ship also was sunk.

The cruisers fired between 40 and 50 shells at the American freighter, Elkund said, but scored only 15 or 18 hits. He added that "Shrapnel was falling like a hail storm."

Four of the merchantmen were armed and three of them fired their deck guns at the enemy warships, but scored no hits, the skipper related. The attack was carried on at close range.

About 350 survivors reached the beach, among them approximately 50 seriously wounded, and after a day and a half there they were paddled seevral miles up a river by natives to a point from which they were taken by bus to a hospital at Cattuck.

The report on the new ship construction was made before the Duluth, Minn., Chamber of Commerce by Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, vice chairman of the Maritime Commission, who predicted that the 1942-43 goal of 23 million deadweight tons of merchant ships might be bettered by five million tons "if everything clicks and we get the steel."

Murray Calls Lewis Traitor to Labor

Murray and granting only lip service to the President of the United States."

Blasting all suggestions that there could ever be peace between him and the bushy-browed U. M. W. president, Murray acknowledged a war to the finish.

"There is no recourse," he said, "there is no other way out.

"It seems that President Lewis is hell-bent toward the creation of national confusion and national discontent."

His speech concluded with the unanimous adoption of an executive board resolution declaring Lewis' actions and policies "a grave danger to the security of our Nation and to the future of the workers in the entire world."

Specifically, Murray charged that:

1. In May, 1941, Ora Gassoway, president of U. M. W. District 50, made a speech to the Indiana State C. I. O. Council, urging Murray's removal from office and a campaign to "draft Lewis" for president of the organization.

2. When Murray was hospitalized for nine weeks in the summer of 1941, District 50 sought to lure away C. I. O. organizers, promising them more money in return for specific pledges "to undermine the officialdom of the C. I. . and various affiliates."

3. In September, Lewis appealed to Van A. Bittner, a U. M. W. official, to run against Murray for president of the steel workers. Bittner refused, "and the record will show what has happened to Mr. Bittner since that time." (The U. M. W. policy committee recommended Tuesday that Bittner's district be split, leaving him with only about one-half of his former members.)

4. Prior to the last C. I. O. convention in Detroit, Lewis disagreed with Murray's proposed report supporting President Roosevelt's foreign policy, and suggested that at Detroit, Murray join with him fighting the President's foreign position. Murray refused, telling Lewis that to do what he suggested "could only be regarded as an act of treason."

5. After the convention, District 50, Lewis and the United Construction Workers, an organization headed by Lewis' brother, A. D. Lewis, and frequently accused of raiding activities, launched "an insidious campaign" directed against Murray.

C. I. O. officials were offered jobs under Lewis, Murray said, on the understanding that "they attempt the destruction of the national C. I. O."

"Men in this hall, not now agents of District 50," Murray declared, "were called in last January and told that there is only one war going on in this country—the war of Lewis against Murray!"

The record shows, Murray continued, through affidavits of 16 workers in a street mill at Williamsport, Pa., that District 50 field organizers told the mill workers to vote against the S. W. O. C. (C. I. O.'s steel workers union) in a coming National Labor Relations Board election.

Murray, speaking only a few hours after Lewis addressed a morning meeting of the miners' policy board with an unequivocal declaration of support of the war effort, also charged that Lewis sought to defeat repeal of sections of the Neutrality Act.

Murray out of Town

The circumstances, Murray explained, took place when he was resting from an illness and had left Washington for two days. He received word from a then employe of Labor's Non-Partisan League—an organization Lewis founded to support President Roosevelt in 1936—that Lewis had asked him to canvass Congress in an "all-out effort to beat" the President's proposals for amending the act to permit arming of merchant vessels. Murray said he was obliged to make known to all members of Congress that this was not the expression of the C. I. O.

Lewis, however, yesterday insisted that criticism he had received as not supporting the war program was "not based upon the truth." He pledged his full support to the war effort and said he had abandoned every other consideration when it became apparent that war could not be avoided. He admitted he had urged nonparticipation in foreign wars for many years, "if that could be avoided."

As if in answer, the resolution adopted by the C. I. O. executive board said Lewis had joined with "the leading agents of appeasement in this country" in a statement in August, 1941, which was "a deliberate attempt to sow suspicion and hostility" against the nations fighting the Axis, that his agents participated in the councils of the America First Committee, that he made no statement when Italy and Germany declared war on the United States, and that last month the U. M. W. magazine carried an editorial "deliberately intended to induce a feeling of defeatism and panic on the question of inflation."

The culmination of the conflict, Murray said, came last week when Lewis convened a meeting of the U. M. W. executive committee while Murray was in conference with President Roosevelt, and without prior notice or without affording him a chance to appeare before the committee, ousted him from office in the union he had served for more than 30 years.

Murray also declared that the money advanced by the U. M. W. to the C. I. O. was obviously a contribution to the labor movement and insurance to the U. M. W.'s own security. "Only one steeped in avarice" could consider the contribution in monetary terms, he added.

In the strongest language, he denounced Lewis' proposal to resume peace negotiations with the A. F. of L. with Lewis as chairman of the peace committee. Only the C. I. O. president, authorized by its executive board, can undertake this work, Murray said.

Dropping the individual instances of the war with Lewis, Murray concluded on the basic, underlying issue.

"Thank God," he said, "we're going to live. Nobody can stop us from living."

New Criminal Court Is Opened

cases scheduled for the summer months involve the death penalty, and it was mainly for this reason that the fourth criminal court was added. Justice Goldsborough said, however, that delays in getting to the somewhat crowded calendar were due to the length of some of the recent criminal trials.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, he added, is expected to complete the Oden murder trial and would then be available, with the rest of the justices, to tackle the docket.

Court assignments for the summer are: July 4 to 9, Justices O'Donoghue and Goldsborough; July 20 to August 4, Justice Laws and Morris; August 5 to 9, Justice Pine; August 20 to September 3, Justice McGuire; September 4 to 19, Chief Justice Eicher and Justices Adkins and Letts; September 20 to October 5, Justices Bailey and Proctor.

5 Indicted for U. S. Contract Fraud

New York, June 3 (AP).—A Federal grand jury charged in five indictments today that five individuals and a corporation conspired to ship adulterated and substandard flavoring extracts and cocoa to Army and Navy stations in 1940 and 1941. The indictments also charged civilian employes of the Army and Navy received bribes.

Named in the indictments were the Plantation Extract Corporation, New York; Leon Juster, officer and part owner; Albert Lind, of Brooklyn, another officer and partner of Juster; Abraham Albert Hochman, Brooklyn, chemist at the Brooklyn Army base; Thomas Galvin, Rye, N. Y., an inspector at the Naval Clothing Depot, Brooklyn; and Arthur C. Herbert, New Rochelle, N. Y., formerly the nominal president of Plantation who left to manufacture and sell extracts of his own.

Gas to Be Rational Like Sugar

will be removed by the registrars to make the book equivalent only to what the driver actually needs.

For the first time, trucks, buses and similar vehicles must obtain rationing coupons, designated as "S," but the OPA emphasized "that there is no intention at the present time to curtail the operations of such vehicles except as the Office of Defense Transportation may provide in its rules and regulations."

All Must Register Again

The approximately 30,000,000 motorists who registered in May for gasoline rationing will be required to repeat the process, some time the latter part of this month. At the initial registration, only "A" and "D" books, the latter providing a basic rationing for motorcyles, will be available.

To obtain the additional rations provided by the "B" and "C" books, motorists will be required to fill out detailed application blanks and present them to their rationing boards for action.

In applying for a supplementary book of coupons, the OPA said, the motorist "will have to prove (1) that he has formed a club of four members who plan to 'double up' or rotate use of their cars, or (2) that alternative means of transportation are inadequate. He will also have to establish the minimum amount of driving that he must do."

Dealers Must Use Coupons

The coupons will be torn out of the books by the dealer when gasoline purchases are made, and the dealer, in turn, must turn in these coupons when getting new stocks from his supplier. This "flow back" of coupons, it was explained, will provide an audit control of every gallon of gasoline distributed under rationing.

Under the temporary rationing system now in effect, there is no accurate check on service stations and here, as well as throughout the rest of the ration area, there have been reports that motorists, who were well known to their dealers could get a full tank of gas with little or no difficulty.

Exact date for beginning of the new program has not been determined, but it will probably be sometime during the first week in July.

While OPA announced provisions of the new system, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson said no decision had been reached yet to make rationing Nation-wide.

July 15 May Be Date

Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), New York, said, however, he understood that Nation-wide rationing would be undertaken July 15.

He said he obtained his information during a conversation with Oil Coordinator Harold L. Ickes.

The possibility of nation-wide rationing brought prompt comment from Congress where the Kansas delegation of two Senators and seven Representatives sent a protest against such action to both Nelson and Henderson.

Venezuela an Ally, Dr. Parra Declares

Completely Identified With U. S. Ideals, Foreign Minister Says

Asserting that Venezuela is "completely identified with the ideals for which the United States is fighting," Dr. Caraccioli Parra Perez, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Venezuela, made it clear at a press conference yesterday, that Venezuela considered herself an ally of the United States. Dr. Parra Perez arrived in Washington early yesterday after having flown from Caracas to Miami, Fla.

In clarifying the attitude of his government, Dr. Parra Perez was explicit in affirming that "the position of Venezuela and its administration, headed by President General Medina, is clear and definite: "We are on the side of the United States and we are cooperating to the limit of our capacity in the defense of the Continent."

Proudly stating the fact that Venezuela was the first Latin-American State to establish a policy of strict vigilance over vital economic and industrial areas as well as rigid supervision over Axis nationals within the country, Dr. Parra Perez cited the actions of his Ministry and government in breaking off relations with Axis powers directly after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The Minister said the war had brought hardship to the people of Venezuela, but added that this was an accepted part of his country's sacrifice in the crusade. He mentioned that his country had agreed to the United States Maritime Commission's proposition that all Axis ships interned in Latin-American countries be utilized for the shipment of oil and other vital war materials to the United States.

Dr. Parra Perez will leave Washington Sunday for a brief tour through industrial areas, returning afterwards to Venezuela from New York.

Treasury Seizes Diplomats' Funds In Excess of $250

The treasury announced yesterday it had taken possession, pending investigation, of all amounts of currency in excess of $250 a person brought from Europe by the diplomats and others who arrived at New York on the steamship Drottningholm Monday.

The announcement said "heavy amounts of currency" were seized under the Treasury's policy of not allowing anyone to bring more than $250 into the country, and that the excess amounts were impounded in the New York Federal Reserve Bank pending proof that none belonged to or was likely to be used in behalf of the Axis.

One passenger declared he had only $249, but when searched was found to have more than $9000 hidden in a sock.

Owner of Gas In Fatal Blast Gets $100 Fine

Charged with storing more than one gallon of gasoline in a private dwelling, Spiros D. Zis, 20, of the 1300 block Girard Street Northwest, was fined $100 in Police Court yesterday.

The charge grew out of a fire at the home of Milton Kitsoulis, 638 Quebec Place Northwest, last Wednesday, in which 5-year-old James Kitsoulis, the property owner's son, was fatally burned.

It was testified by Detective A. E. Fredette that Zis admitted having about 24 gallons of gasoline stored in the garage of the Kitsoulis home and that the fluid ignited while he was pouring some into an automobile.

Meeting Called In Hospital Crisis

plus board.

Col. McDiarmid informed Commissioner Mason that the situation at Columbia, a maternity hospital, which has been filled to capacity for months, has become so grave that one entire ward may have to be closed for lack of nurses.

Other hospitals are in the same boat, the institution's head asserted.

Meeting Set for 2:30 P. M.

Tomorrow's meeting of superintendents of private hospitals and of Gallinger Municipal Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanitorium, which are District-operated, will be held at 2:30 p. m.

Should it become necessary for any hospitals to reduce their patient loads, such restrictions, ironically, would come at a time when demand for rooms is the highest in the Capital's history, when the hospitals are requesting Federal aid for physical expansion.

Acknowledging that the situation has reached the critical stage, Miss Edith Beattie, executive secretary of the Graduate Nurses' Association, appealed for inactive members of the profession to return to duty. Likewise she urged untrained women to volunteer as Red Cross nurses' aides who, she said, are doing a splendid job in relieving the burden.

Enlistment in the Army and Navy nursing corps and removal from Washington of nurses whose military service husbands have been transferred elsewhere were cited as contributing factors to the shortage.

Approximately 5000 are registered in Washington, which is no more than the city had before the war boom boosted the population, said Miss Beattie.

To help meet the situation, a good many private duty nurses are performing voluntary service in hospitals in their spare time, she declared. Plans are now being drafted, she added, to establish "volunteer panels," by which this form of relief would be contributed on a systematic, rotating basis.

Miss Beattie appealed to high school graduates who are interested in a nursing career, to graduate nurses—many of them now doctors' wives—who have retired or become inactive, to women who have some time to spare to train and serve as nurses' aides—to come to registry headquarters, 1746 K Street Northwest, for information.

"To win this war we must provide good care for the sick on the home front, too," she said.

India May Become Far East Arsenal

Grady Back in D. C., Suggests Shipping Equipment to Orient

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Former Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady, chairman of the American Technical Mission to India, returned to Washington yesterday after laying the groundwork for an industrial expansion which it is hoped will make India a great arsenal for the armed forces of the United Nations in the Near East and the Far East.

His recommendations call for the sending of American experts to India and also for the shipment there of considerable quantities of machine tools and other essential equipment. The Americans will have a role much like that of their compatriots who, in the 20's and 30's, helped in the industrialization of Russia.

Dr. Grady left here on April 3 by plane. In two months, going and coming by way of the South Atlantic he flew approximately 40,000 miles. It was his second trip to India by air. The last time, in the fall of 1941, he took off from San Francisco and flew over the Pacific to the Philippines, Java and Free China as well as to India. Thus he has circled the globe by air.

Dr. Grady was optimistic over the progress made by his mission. He and his colleagues visited plants in and around Calcutta, Jamshedpur and Bombay which are turning out rifles, machine guns, ammunition, motorized equipment and uniforms. He said the Indian industrialists were happy to receive their recommendations.

The U. S. Army bombing of Tokyo and other Japanese cities, Dr. Grady said, made a tremendous impression in India. He said he heard military men say that General Doolittle's feat undoubtedly caused the Japanese high command to transfer naval and air units from such areas as the Bay of Bengal.

Dr. Grady said that the sole function of the American Technical Mission was to help India augment her war production, and thus help in the common war effort of the United Nations. He added, however, that it was clear that any industrial expansion in India now would have an important effect on her post-war economy.

He looked forward to the day when India, China and Russia will be extremely important in the world picture. India, he emphasized, has nearly everything to provide the basis for industrial expansion—raw materials such as coal and iron, plenty of intelligent labor, adequate power, excellent management as demonstrated at the huge Tata steel works, a far-flung transportation system, and, finally, population of 350 million which, in Dr. Grady's opinion, has tremendous potentialities.

House Unit Scolds NLRB for 'Go To Hell Attitude'

By the Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board drew a congressional rebuke yesterday for what one member of the House Appropriations Committee called a "go to hell attitude" toward Congress, and another described as a "most outrageous misuse of funds."

In sending to the House floor a supply bill containing the board's funds for the next fiscal year, the Appropriations Committee complained that the board, "in complete disregard of the action of the Congress," reallocated field positions during the past year at a total annual cost of $46,000 after Congress expressly had refused to provide funds for that purpose.

Refusing to approve an appropriation to continue the additional salaries, the committee said "this is the second occasion within two years in which the National Labor Relations Board has expended funds for a purpose denied by action of the Congress."

Testifies Here

MBS Chief Indorses FCC Policy

Alfred J. McCosker, New York, head of the Mutual Broadcasting System, defended the Federal Communications Commission's practices yesterday and urged the House Interstate Committee to take no action that might jeopardize free competition in network broadcasting.

Testifying on legislation providing for broad changes in the FCC setup, McCosker said "free competition in network broadcasting is at stake if legislation is passed nullifying" the commission's recent network regulations.

Now in Litigation

Under these regulations, now the subject of litigation in Federal courts, the commission sought to curtail the activities of the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Both N. B. C. and C. B. S. have generally indorsed the legislation being studied by the committee.

Should the effectiveness of the FCC regulations be blocked, McCosker said, "No one outside of an insane asylum" would in the future attempt to operate a national network.

He asserted opponents of the commission and its regulations were seeking to have Congress reverse the FCC and were not "very much interested in the technical procedural parts of this bill."

Finds No Complex

Nowhere in the commission's order, McCosker said, could he find "any tendencies toward Government ownership of stations" or any indication that the commission "suffers from a common-carrier complex."

"We oppose any legislation that would cause further delay and that would deprive the commission of its power to adopt such regulations," he said.

Opposing a proposal to license networks, McCosker said such action would "invite the very sort of governmental interference that N. B. C. and C. B. S profess to fear, control over programs and conirol over rates—in other words, censorship and common carrier regulation."

Dutch Harbor

Some days ago Secretary Stimson warned the American people that "face" would force the Japanese to attack an American city soon in reprisal for General Doolittle's highly successful raid on Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya. The bombing of Dutch Harbor by Japanese planes apparently based on a carrier would seem to fit into that category. Since only five bombers and 15 fighters took part in the first raid, the damage could hardly have been great. There has been no detail made public of the second raid six hours later. At any rate, the raids on Dutch Harbor were in line with recent Japanese efforts to smash up United Nations bases from which further aerial assault on the Japanese islands can be launched. It was, therefore, the companion piece to the present campaign in the Chekiang and Fukien provinces of China. How much damage the raiders did at Dutch Harbor and what price they were made to pay for the venture have not yet been revealed. In any case the enemy is not likely to buy permanent immunity from raids on his home territory by such tactics. The day of retribution for Pearl Harbor may be long in coming. It will come as certainly as the sun will rise.

On Illiteracy

A great many persons, including President Roosevelt, are grievously perturbed by the revelation that more than 430,000 young men, otherwise sound, have been rejected for service because they do not satisfy the Army's "literacy requirements." These requirements, it seems, are a minimum of four years schooling. Thus our Army would have excluded such promising military candidates as Charles Martel, Godefroy de Boullion, Jenghis Khan, Richard the Lion Heart, St. Joan of Arc, Marshal Ney and Andrew Jackson. For all we know they might also have excluded Homer and William Shakespeare.

At any rate, it would appear that in times past the absence of formal education, or even the inability to read and write, did not, of itself, prevent a man from becoming a successful soldier, any more than it prevented him becoming a great craftsman, artist or even a great poet. In the more complicated parts of our complicated civilization—and these, of course, would include the Army and Navy—a considerable degree of literacy is no doubt essential. But it would be as great a mistake to confuse literacy and intelligence as it is to confuse intelligence and wisdom.

Tons Of Publicity

Senator Tydings is doing some valuable publicity work himself by calling attention to the wasteful publicity methods of Government departments and agencies. The extent of the waste cannot be measured, however, in terms of tons of paper consumed or lines of printed matter mailed to newspapers and private citizens. Some of that material is extremely useful. Indeed, it is sometimes indispensable to those seeking an intelligent understanding of the working of our Government. To make such information inaccessible would seriously handicap critics and analysts of Government policies and even Congress itself.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that the Tydings Committee will be careful—when making recommendations for cuts in publicity appropriations—to discriminate between the useful and superfluous. The chief reason for the tremendous expansion that has occurred in Federal publicity outlays in recent years is the increasing emphasis placed upon propaganda as distinct from straight reporting of facts. Even annual reports that used to be objective accounts of department and agency activities have in many cases become organs for the dissemination of theories and the spreading of political propaganda. Unless this type of publicity is specifically singled out for suppression, there is grave danger that enforced economies in publicity outlays will impair the valuable information services, leaving the special pleaders free to exercise their persuasive arts.

Draft Age

One of the effects of the overoptimism against which the President recently warned the country is that such overoptimism breeds postponement of the inevitable. Take, for instance, the matter of the drafting of the youths of 18 and 19. As General Hershey, National Selective Service director, says, we never have got through a war yet without going down to 18. If, therefore, a feeling gets around that this is going to be a short war, then the tendency will be to think that there may be no necessity to lower the draft age below the statutory 20.

We must accept the repeated statement of the War Department that the need for lowering the draft age is greater in this war than in any other. Here for the first time in our history we have been encircled in a global war. It is a war which calls for such exertions that none can escape the obligation to serve in some way or other. We ourselves were so backward in our preparedness that we have been forced to see the enemy bestride entire continents. Finally, this is the kind of war which in the air and in the mechanized units is best fought by young men.

Why there is such great reluctance to lower the draft age is understandable enough. Nobody likes to see the boys in their late teens called to service. Yet nobody likes anything that has to be done in the name of war. It is all distasteful. The overriding fact remains that we have a war on our hands, and that the quicker this war is won, the sooner we can return to the ways of peaceful living. In these circumstances there cannot be life as usual for any member of the community. The war would drag on interminably, and might indeed be lost, if we were to allow our sentiments to thwart the mobilization of the entire people in this all-out effort.

Doubtless there are ways and means of softening the initial impact of military service upon our youth. The move to introduce military training into the colleges would prevent any interruption of educational studies. There ought not to be an indiscriminate lumping together of youth with older men in the training camps. These and other arguments in favor of particular care for our youth merit assurances from the War Department. Yet they are not arguments against the lowering of the draft age. Indeed, the arguments that have been arrayed against the War Department's plea are actually unfair to the Nation's youth. Our young men have been brought up to revere the men who won our Nation's liberties on the field of battle. It is a high privilege—and we feel they will regard it as such—that to this generation is given the task of rewinning those liberties.

The notion that military service would prevent the youth from becoming good citizens is altogether perverted. It is an insult to the uniform as to the cause. What is the purpose of this war if not to insure an environment for citizenship? There would be no citizenship, but slavery, if the Axis were to triumph. Thus service in one form or other is now the hallmark of citizenship. In other words, the emphasis which for so long was put upon the enjoyment of our rights as American citizens has now been shifted to our duties as American citizens.

The question at issue should be approached on a practical, not an emotional, plane. For in our emotions we are apt to forget that under the War Department's plan the youths of 18 and 19 would be called up only for training. They could not be sent abroad for many months after induction. But the aid that they can give now would insure that more striking power could be delivered now against our enemies by the older brackets. That is what explains the anxiety of the War Department. The people are demanding that we join in the attack on Germany and Japan, and that demand requires that we put nothing in the way of our military services in mounting such an offensive.

Silver Fantasy

You might think that "doing something for silver" plans had been put in cold storage for the duration. The Nation has already paid heavily through the nose for its silver policies. But the silver Senators are unabashed. Senator McCarran, for example, now proposes to distribute our hoard by such devices as lend-leasing silver to China. The Senator seems to think of the plan as a piece of altruism, and that the silver industry ought to be compensated for it. So he calmly adds the further suggestion that the fixed domestic price ought to be upped to $1 an ounce.

China is in the same boat as ourselves—she wants anything but silver. Things to fight with, for example. Even before the war she had more foresight in her buying policies than we had. While we bought silver instead of war materials she got rid of her silver in exchange for war materials. Much of China's vast hoard, indeed, now reposes in West Point and other centers. And we are stuck with it. Only a man who trades on the shortness of the public memory would suggest that we might lend-lease that silver back to China. What would China do with it? The Nevadan blandly suggests that the metal might be used to bolster China's currency, though our silver actually drove China off the silver standard!

As to the suggestion that our miners ought to be paid $1 an ounce for their product, that is equally an insult to the public intelligence. The miners already get 71 cents an ounce from the Treasury. That is twice the market price. No more shameful subsidy is on record, and, if Congress wishes to restore its good name, it would strike the law which permits such a subsidy off the statute books. The only tolerable silver plan today is to take the Treasury out of the market and allow our war industry to buy both the mined silver and our hoards in straightening out our industrial bottlenecks. Silver should be pampered no more. It is time it went to work like a good soldier with all our other resources.

Rommel Bested

The outwitting of Marshal Rommel impairs a great reputation. Rommel has again and again demonstrated that he is a strategist and tactician of a very high order. He proved his mettle in the brilliant campaign he conducted in the spring of 1941. After a British drive across Cyrenaica, his mechanized columns regained in a fortnight practically all the ground previously taken by the enemy. In June of the same year he nipped in the bud a large-scale British effort to renew their offensive operations. No wonder, then, that the British entertain a very healthy respect for his abilities. No wonder they were uneasy when, on May 26, Rommel gave the order to his troops to launch a "decisive attack."

In view of what has since happened, there are reasons to believe that the motives behind the German-Italian offensive were as much political as military. The Axis has not won many victories lately, and internal pressure both in Italy and Germany is steadily rising. A successful Axis drive into Egypt, the smashing of the British forces defending Suez, would thus be enormously valuable to Hitler and Mussolini. Furthermore, the more the Allies found it necessary to send land and air reinforcements to Libya, the less likely the possibility of a second land front being established on the European continent. On the other hand, the season for offensive action in North Africa is now rapidly drawing to a close. And Rommel could hardly have been ignorant of the fact that the British, as well as his own forces, have been considerably reinforced during recent months. It is possible, therefore, that it was instructions from Berlin rather than any nice calculation of military probabilities that led Rommel to act.

Certainly he has had a rude awakening. After four days of fierce fighting Rommel found his objective beyond reach. His advance forces were beginning to run out of gasoline and water. A retreat was ordered. The British barred the way. Part at least of Rommel's forces managed to fight their way to the west, and the rest of what is left of the original attacking force may succeed in doing the same. The losses which the Afrika-Corps has suffered in man power, tanks and planes have, however, been considerable. In fact, even if Rommel succeeds in extricating his army, he may now no longer be able to mount a new offensive.

Another period of stalemate would be far more advantageous to the Allies in Libya than to the Axis. For when it comes to reinforcements and replacements, the Allies will soon be, if they are not already, in a far more advantageous position than the enemy. Their production is mounting. That of the Axis is declining. Unless, therefore, the tide of battle in Libya undergoes a sudden and unexpected turn, the fighting of the past week may prove to be a major Allied victory, a victory which events may even prove to have been decisive.

THE SERPENT AND THE SUN
Mexico: 1942

He moved, a band of green gold fire
Between the tangled rose and brier;
The swift and ever-flickering tongue
Rose forked in sharp desire.

High was the diamond hood upflung;
We saw him turn, we saw him slide;
And in green-feathered grasses hide,
A bright thing, deified.

We saw the jeweled copper sheath
Split open—thus we saw him rise
Between the lilies and the weeds
Up—toward the dusty skies.

We saw above the shuddering reeds
A thing most secret and most fair;
We saw the Winged Snake arise
Like shaken flame to hollow air . . .

As though some ancient goal were won,
Some old, strange, sorrowing were broken,
As though an Archangel had spoken,
We saw the Serpent seek the Sun.

Guthrie Resignation

It seems to me that we should encourage the exposition of inefficiency, disloyalty or other practices contrary to public interests, and especially concerning our present war effort.

We can encourage such exposition if we are sympathetic toward constructive criticism of any such evil practices and if we will at least see to it that those who are courageous enough to call public attention to the evil conditions are not penalized for doing so. Many years after Gen. William Mitchell called public attention to the inadequacy of our air force, and was court-martialed for doing so, recognition of the correctness of the criticism he made was officially given and rewarded, but posthumously.

I write to call special attention to the situation respecting Mr. Robert R. Guthrie, whose courageous resignation from his post in the War Production Board in order to call public attention to the failure of business to convert its assets and energies from business as usual to business for war only, proved to be so advantageous to this country. Following his resignation and the Congressional investigation and the publicity resulting therefrom, the War Production Board put into effect soon thereafter many of the recommendations Mr. Guthrie had made. Apparently, the only effective method he could get to focus attention on the evil was to resign.

Let us encourage more of such constructive criticism, and the best way to encourage it would be to see to it that, if not rewarded, at least the persons courageous enough to criticize in such manner would not be let down. I think special attention ought to be given to Mr. Guthrie, whose interest in the war effort was so loyally demonstrated that he was willing to sacrifice himself for the public good. Certainly a position of greater responsibility may be entrusted to Mr. Guthrie's hands, and thereby let others know that, if they too can improve the service by exposing evil conditions, they, too, may expect their just desserts. SAMUEL HORWITZ.
Cleveland, Ohio, May 29.

Use Of Official Cars

Another Normandie fiasco is being pulled by the burning up of tires on Government cars and trucks. By that, I mean wasted mileage by personal use of official cars, overloading, improper care, and inflation of tires.

The public has the right to insist on sterner policies of use and maintenance of Government cars. Those who have access to those cars seem to think they can use them as they please, drive them home at night, haul their friends to lunch, go shopping, etc.

No wonder so many department chiefs boast an "A" card—they have an official car drive out for them—and the chauffeur has already driven out Central Avenue for his girl!

If the public is admonished to reduce speed and cut out unnecessary driving, the same should apply to Government departments, District of Columbia and Federal.

As a general hint to officials responsible, I suggest they should read the "Revised Tire Rationing Regulations," Section 405, which says in part, "nor shall such vehicles be used for official convenience, when public means of transportation will serve."

Just because the department hasn't had to apply for rationed tires is no reason to permit carelessness to wear out present tires.

Every Government vehicle should have a regular daily log or mainfest to be checked regularly by a responsible clerk. "DISGUSTED."

Yugoslavian Position

It does not seem unusual that the people of the United States and the people of Yugoslavia should at the present time be fighting together their common enemies. They fought together during the last World War, and then, too, they fought for the same ideals. During the post war period Yugoslavia surrounded by the waves of fascism never had a chance to realize those ideals for which it fought. Many governments were changed, but these were influenced by the outside and corrupt world, and did not represent the democratic desires of the peoples at home. But, the time had finally come to act and clean the house. The coup d'etat of March 27, 1941, was a spontaneous revolt of the people—the people that had not changed their democratic convictions. This coup d'etat in many ways, resembled that of June 11, 1903, when the people revolted and overthrew the rulers, who pursued an antinational policy. There are many such examples in Yugoslav history. And, since Yugoslavia is a peasant nation, it is no wonder that its armies are always on the side of the people, and act on behalf of the people.

In looking over some of my older periodicals, I find the following interesting quotation. It is taken from the South Slav Herald (May 6, 1934, page 2), published in Belgrade:

"The chief of the American staff, General MacArthur, visiting the different military institutions in Yugoslavia years ago, said:

"'There exists a mysterious bond which connects the American and the Yugoslav armies. It is not a pact, nor an alliance, nor a declaration, but this bond contains the eternal moral expression of friendship which excludes every alienation, because our wishes, our sentiments and our general characteristics are the same.'"

Offensive Now

Each day we see more atrocity stories in the press about the barbarious fascist crimes and each day we feel the need more and more for an immediate opening of a western front in Europe to bring an end to these horrible deeds being carried out by Hitler, Germany.

By starting an offensive now, we can save millions of lives and bring what would be a long drawn-out battle to a quick and successful conclusion.

Hitler is being weakened on the east by the Soviet Union and on the west by the attacks of the R. A. F. A still stronger attack on the west will pinch Germany so that defeat will be theirs while there will be victory for the Allied Nations.

Democracy In Wartime

With the majority of the people in the country opposed to the drafting of boys 18 to 19 years of age, it will be evident to the people—if the boys of these ages are drafted—that they, the people, have very little to say after all in the affairs of the country. What has happened to democracy? J. H. M.

Windsor Visit

Several times since coming to Washington to live, I have had impulse to contact "Aunt Bessie" to tell her that for seven years I was a very close next door neighbor to her brother, Mr. W. L. Montague, Mrs. Montague and Sally, in Charlotte, N. C.

"It just isn't being done," prevented.

I'm still wondering if the Duchess of Windsor and Aunt Bessie appreciated "Monty." Although I regretted his passing recently, I was rather glad when I saw newspaper headlines: "Windsors to Receive Chill Welcome Here" that he could not know the daughter of his beloved sister "Alice" was being accorded such undeserved treatment. The fact that the Duke of Windsor comes to Washington to discuss American Bahaman defense problems with various officials certainly is not grounds for jumping to conclusions that he and his American-born duchess are here for ulterior motives or personal aggrandizement.

This implication would grieve the spirit of "Monty," but he would know that what was said should not in the least deter "Wallis and Edward" from a duty toward humanity. Circumstances determine attitudes. When the former King of England gave up the British throne, he did not necessarily renounce his obligation toward people. As governor-general and commander in chief of the 20 inhabited and many uninhabited islands whose defenses in the present hazardous set-up are negligible, he not only should be credited with coming to Washington in the interest of the people, much as he would do were he king of England, but if mean motives must be attributed, why not say it is the law of self-preservation—not a silly social ambition.

"Wallis never was a beauty like her mother, but she makes friends," her uncle summarized. "So does Edward." People who imagine the couple would take advantage of their power of appeal are entirely in error. Innate good breeding would prevent Wallis' doing anything to complicate international relations or personally offend society.

The picture of her character I received from hearing her uncle talk with fondness of her and her family, and the fact that she took trouble to send to "Sally" such finery from France and elsewhere as would make a Cinderella, causes me to resent propaganda now being circulated against utterly fine persons. Horse Racing

I would like to know how horse racing can help the morale of the American people. We are fighting for our national life and for the lives of people all over the world going down before organized selfishness. How is it going to help the world for our young people to learn to gamble? Will it help the tire situation to have them come streaming into the races?

Here in Shepherdstown people stand on the street corners and watch the cars go by to and from the races in Charles Town and say, "It's like a funeral, isn't it? "Come to think of it, it is like a funeral. It suggests the funeral of a whole lot of brave soldiers who look to the ones back home for all out assistance.

England and Australia have cut out horse racing for the duration. I hope we do, too, and I would like to see nine-tenths of the saloons closed for the same period.

America has a job to do. Those who fatten on the weaknesses of human nature don't help her. They help Hitler.

The Post Impressionist

Examining Memories

The Civil Service Commission in 1905 occupied a five-story red-brick building at Eighth and E Street, and there I found it, after arriving at the Sixth Street station on the Mall, and first went to work for the Government. I was sent to a large southern room on the fourth floor, where some 20 examiners rated the papers of aspirants. They were a congenial group of men and women of various ages, with an honest and rather scholarly slant upon life and their share of odd opinions.

I became one of some four or five whose task was to rate the papers offered by applicants under the head of "letter-writing," which in those days, and I believe for long afterward, was a sort of combined test of English and general intelligence. The sufferer had to write 200 words, in the form of a letter to the commission, about one of two subjects printed at the head of the sheet. These topics were roughly of the type then commonly aired in high school debating societies, and their choice was one of the points on which the commission had to take a good deal of ragging from hostile observers. Nevertheles, they probably served the purpose about as well as the modern teasers that are supposed to betray each millimeter of unintelligence, and with much less fuss and fidget. When you had read a man's 200 words about anything under heaven you could place him pretty squarely in the plot where Nature grew him.

At least the examiners were well agreed in the spotting. Each "letter" was marked by two of them. The first wrote his 70 or 75, or better or worse, in red pencil at the top; the second kept the red ratings covered, and never, never peeked, until he had added his own judgement in blue. All was clear if they hit upon the same multiple of five. If one said 75 and the other 80 the rating was made 78 without more ado. If the difference was wider they consulted or referred the question, but arguments, however enjoyable, were rarely needed. The passing grade was 70, most of the figures ran in the seventies, 85 was unusual, and there was just a legend in the commission that someone's letter had been rated over 90.

There was drudgery in the task, of course, but the recompense was laughter. There were hundreds of unfunny letters to one that yielded even a smile, but the occasional outbreak of chuckles and whinnies was a mark of that room, setting it apart from all other offices I have known. Laughs were common enough to pass without particular notice, but specimens of rich ore were likely to be handed about in the room, and copies of the rarest essays were sometimes made and preserved.

I trust the lapse of years will protect me from any complaint of unlawful disposal of records if I reproduce one or two that date from my time in the commission. Even my description of methods would have been considered an unseemly betrayal at the time, but I feel no more compunction now than one who rummages an Egyptian tomb.

If I would I could not disclose anything discreditable, for the whole staff seemed to strive in the spirit of the commission's high civic function. Theodore Roosevelt was President of the United States and it had not been long since he was one of the commissioners in that very building, whose walls still echoed to his emphasis. He was a kind of storied giant in the commission's annals, and though I would not suggest that he was the source of the sense of integrity that ruled the place, for that had older and deeper springs, his presence was certainly a prod for anybody's qualities.

The "merit" motive ran through all the routine and appeared in a warning set out in the instructions for letter-writers thus:

"The competitor must avoid allusions to his political or religious opinions or affiliations."

One eager competitor was so dazzled by the lofty phrasing of this notice that he overlooked the assigned topics altogether and drove thus smartly to the heart of the matter:

"My allusions avoiding political or religious opinions. And they are this as to affiliation "I deem it as being the first step in honesty." It takes religion concludingly to make a man. If there were no religion or if a man had not religious opinions, in my estimation we would be in a vast condition, but having religion and other things combined, we have the pleasure of using our opinions. And by having religion and using our opinions, we are able to hold the office to which we seek. I deem it necessary for everyone to have some opinion voidingly according to standing. And what I've gone on to say is my opinions accordingly as to allusions voidingly and political affiliation."

Not so pointed, but reflecting the scene of 1906 in a fascinating light is this bit from a would-be messenger boy's letter on "Some great invention and the benefits derived from it."

"The thing of nowadays is the automobile, I think it is one of the greatest horseless wagons in the world.

"In the City of San Francisco the automobiles are not aloud to run less than 6 miles an hour. In the park it runs 10 miles an hour, because it is out of the city limits.

"Our city fire chief has a large handsome automobile which rushes through the street at a rate of 20 miles an hour, in case of fire only. If anything should happen that is a blockade it backs right up just like a horse."

I suppose those days were in all points primitive, but there was no one to tell us so. We thought the commission's ways were up-to-date and willingly defended them. The staff numbered fewer than 200 and I doubt that anyone foresaw a great expansion. Only a bold and ridiculous fancy would have surmised that the commission might one day use the whole of the nearby Patent Office Building and then overflow it.

The old brick building at the northwest corner of Eight and E still stands, and by a curious turn of chance the commission's swirling growth has swept from its headquarters in the old Patent Office through the old Land Office and over the street into its ancient habitation. The building is much altered, though, and you may listen vainly in the halls for any rumble of Theodorian footsteps.

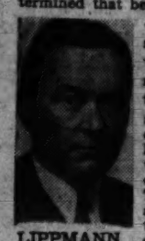
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Will They Believe Us?

WILL THE PEOPLES of the world believe us when General Marshall says that "We are determined that before the sun sets on this terrible struggle our flag will be recognized throughout the world as a symbol of freedom on the one hand and of overwhelming force on the other?" The only way to answer that question honestly is to say that the peoples of the world will have to be shown. They know that we believe in freedom. They know that we are capable of becoming very powerful. But they do not yet know whether we have the wisdom and the knowledge and the will power and the perseverance, to use our power in the cause of freedom.



LIPPMANN

This is the unanswered question in the minds of men everywhere, and because of it we are in all our dealings weakened and the whole conduct of the war is harder. Thus when the peoples of the world read the speech which Mr. Sumner Welles has just delivered, they will note that Mr. Welles was not only making a great declaration of American policy. They will note that Mr. Welles was aware that he must still debate the foundations of the policy with his own countrymen. The voice of America is, therefore, too uncertain and unclear to be convincing. Our voice is muffled and our actions are undermined because we cannot be sure that we are moving toward a great peace and not toward another great debate in the Senate of the United States.

THIS IS the ghost from our past which haunts us wherever we turn, whatever we say, whenever we try to make any long plan for the conduct of the war, or for the period of the armistice which will follow the war, or for the settlement of the peace and the demobilization. This ghost is not laid when public men stand up and say, that, no matter what they thought before, since December 7 they have given unreserved support to the war. The ghost continues to walk because nobody can forget the history of our factions from November 11, 1918, to December 7, 1941.

The world remembers that on Armistice Day of the other war our flag was recognized throughout the world as the symbol of freedom on the one hand and of overwhelming force on the other. We stood then where General Marshall says we are determined to stand at the end of this terrible struggle. The world remembers that in the next 15 years we dismantled our force and, except for occasional pious words, we abandoned the cause of law and order upon which the realities of freedom depend. And so, until we can carry the conviction that this will not happen again, we cannot speak clearly or act effectively.

CERTAINLY we cannot convince our allies, or the enemy peoples, or the neutrals unless it is evident that we have convinced ourselves. What does that mean? It means, I submit, that we cannot be the reliable champions of freedom just because we admire freedom and have great military power. The crucial question is whether, in Mr. Welles' penetrating observation, we are convinced that our own enlightened self-interest demands that we take our part in maintaining the law and order of the world.

There is no use telling the world that our hearts are soft. The question is whether our heads are hard. For while we are, let us hope, generous and chivalrous in our intentions, we need not pretend—because no one will believe us—that we shall act greatly over long stretches of time unless we feel it to be self-evident that this is the only sensible, the only safe, the only profitable way to act. For the exaltations of war will pass. And unless the promises we now make and the resolutions we take now have become ingrained in our common sense, they will float away again, as in 1919, upon thin air.

WHAT HAPPENS will depend, I believe, upon how the industrialists of America interpret the tremendous experience which they are now having. Will they think that they can return to normalcy in another Harding-Coolidge era? Will they think that our armies can be demobilized, and industry reconverted and trade restored by dissolving our alliances and dismantling the war controls? Will they believe they can have one more try at a policy of let-her-rip and the devil take the hindmost? If they do think this, they will find politicians to do the demagoguery to carry out such ideas. But if the industrialists, or any considerable number of them, take this line, they will surely ruin themselves. They will cause a national disaster. They will wreck all prospect of peace in the world. Yet we must not fool ourselves. The temptation will be strong. The flesh is weak and will be yielding. The will to resist the temptation to sacrifice the long future to immediate profit requires self-restraint and character of a higher order than men usually exhibit in the aftermath of a war.

ALL ONE can say is that in the past six months American industrialists have by their deeds regained and have enhanced the reputation they lost in the collapse of 1929. In the struggle for survival against all the other social orders, they are proving their fitness to survive. The world of the future, including the American world, will never again be what it was before 1929, or even before 1941. But in that world the industrialists are by what they are now doing for the country winning a place and the certainty of being able to play an important part in shaping the world of the future.

All this will, however, vanish if they yield again to the demagogues of normalcy. The reputation of businessmen will collapse with the collapse of the American economy. It will collapse if businessmen do not teach the politicians who profess to represent their interests that this is no time for the same old tom-toms and war whoops, the same old hobgoblins and scarecrows, and—speaking literally and soberly—the same old damned nonsense which gave us the Harding era as a reward for our trouble the last time.

French Canada

By Janet R. Keith

Is It Pro-Axis?

WHEN THE NAZIS torpedoed two vessels in the St. Lawrence River, they brought war to the very heart of French Canada. Yet Quebec is still proclaiming as loudly as ever that she will never submit to conscription for overseas. The rest of the continent begins to grow impatient. What is wrong with these people that they cling to their isolationism in the face of imminent danger? Old suspicions begin to come to life again, and disturbing questions cry out for an answer.

There is one question more disturbing than all the rest: Is French Canada really pro-Nazi and pro-Vichy? Is she holding back because she secretly wants Hitler to win?

It is not hard to discover evidence of Fascist sympathy in Quebec. The Vichy consulates, permitted to remain open until recently, have undoubtedly been distributing Nazi propaganda very effectively. Certain French-language newspapers have been accused of playing up dispatches from Berlin, Rome and Tokyo, forgetting all about British and American communiques, and printing word for word Vichy propaganda releases broadcast to America by shortwave. Certain Catholic papers which have used radio stations to preach against compulsory schooling and international unions are now using them to preach against Russia. So successful has their propaganda been that a gang of Montreal students mobbed a Red Cross "Aid to Russia" meeting.

THE PLEBISCITE provided an opportunity for the formation of "leagues" whose purpose was to work for a "No," vote, opposing conscription for overseas. As well as working on the plebiscite, many of these organiations provided a good channel for anti-British, anti-foreign, anti-Jewish, anti-Communist propaganda. One of the worst features of the plebiscite was that it gave Fascist elements an opportunity to become vocal and to organize.

Typical of Nazi propaganda in Quebec is this type of argument: "Canada is not in danger. Quebec is not in danger. Those who pretend that we are threatened are only talking British propaganda. Even if Hitler did come to Canada, it would be only the rich who would suffer. The people like us would be well treated. All this about the regime of terror the Nazis would establish here is just so much more English propaganda."

French Canadians on the whole have not felt actively hostile toward the Vichy regime. Perhaps there has been a logical reason. France, with all her faults, still has prestige in the eyes of French-speaking people all over the world. Petain is apt to be regarded by French Canadians as a national martyr, an old man who struggled bravely to shield his people from Hitler. There is also the religious factor: many Catholics prefer Petain's regime to the anticlericalism of the Third Republic. Laval is a different matter; many who make excuses for Petain regard Laval as a traitor.

These pro-Fascist, pro-Vichy tendencies represent one side, and an alarming one, of the French Canadian picture. There is, on the other hand, a great body of loyal French Canadians who willingly send their sons into the armed forces and who would willingly give their lives to defend Canada. They oppose conscription for overseas only because it has been deliberately misrepresented to them by politicians for so long that they fail to understand the issue at stake. As one French Canadian spokesman put it:

"For 20 years conscription has been made by politicians into a monster to frighten French Canadians. The people of Quebec have been told until they believe it that conscription would mean only one thing: all available man power put in uniform and shipped to England, leaving Canada defenseless. We French Canadians are loyal to Britain, which has protected us, but our first concern is still our homes, our children and our country."

"We French Canadians are not cowards," says the father of a boy in the army. "We are willing and eager to fight and to give our lives to defend any square foot of Canada. But we do not wish to go to the other side of the sea when all the time we are being told that Canada is in danger of invasion. We wish with all our hearts the success of England; we wish to aid her with all our resources and our efforts, but—sacred name of a dog—we do not wish to be thousands of miles from here when the enemy may be at our shores."

QUEBEC'S war effort has been by no means inconsequential. In spite of her opposition to conscription, she has supplied approximately one-sixth of the men in the Canadian army, one-tenth of the air force, one-seventh of the navy. If many average French Canadians don't understand the issues at stake, it is not their fault. It is the fault of fascists, politicians, newspaper publishers, and radio stations who have deliberately misled a simple and largely illiterate body of people.

It is the fault to some extent of the federal government of Canada, which has courted disaster in Quebec again and again. The government has never told Quebec honestly what is needed: total mobilization of man power and resources, with so many men allocated to home defense, so many to farms and industry, so many for overseas. Instead, it held a national plebiscite without preparing the French Canadians to answer intelligently.

The government should have closed the Vichy consulates long ago, for there is no doubt that they have been hotbeds of propaganda. It should have taken a firm stand with newspapers and radio stations who openly sympathized with the Nazis.

For nearly three years the government has let these Fascist agencies poison the minds of the French Canadian people. Now the damage is done.

Marthe d'Olne, a well-known French writer, recently made a tour of Quebec. Here is her opinion: "No; there are not here people who think as do the majority among Canadians. No; they do not feel the importance of the essential principles for which the free peoples fight in this war. No; there is no hope that they will feel it necessary for their sons to fight for anything except the soil of Canada. Is there no chance of a closer understanding being established between French and English Canadians through this war? There may be, but I should not like to be the one to have to establish it."

Hitler's Generals

By Louis P. Lochner

Der Fuehrer Doesn't Trust Them

NEW YORK, June 3 (Wide World).—It's revolvers down and belts off for any general or field marshal who wants to see Adolf Hitler at his G. H. Q. in East Prussia, or in the Berlin chancellory, or anywhere else.

No matter how well an army, navy, or airforce leader may know der fuehrer, no matter how completely in his confidence he may believe himself to be, the German dictator takes no chances.

Hence, before anybody can come into his presence, he must park his pistol, his military belt, or his saber in the anteroom.

The erstwhile corporal of the first World War loves the game of war more than he lives anything else. He wants to out-Napoleon Napoleon.

Filled as he is with military ambition, he can tolerate no other gods beside himself. The late Colonel-General von Fritsch, the father of the present Germany army, had to resign because he dared criticize Hitler's acquiescence in Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg's marital mesalliance in 1938.

GENERAL BECK, chief of the German general staff, became "ill" just before the outbreak of the present war. He opposed Hitler's policy of frightfulness.

General Halder, the present chief of general staff, has been promoted only to colonel-general, while a dozen of his colleagues were made field marshals, simply because—so the rumor goes—he is forever warning the dictator that this or that contemplated move involves more risks than the undertaking is worth.

Field Marshal von Brauchitsch, who always gave the impression of being in the pink of condition, "resigned" shortly before Christmas because of heart trouble, now is reported imprisoned. His resignation coincided with the discovery that the army was nowise prepared for the severe winter in Russia. There can be little doubt that he warned Hitler in time.

General Blaskowitz, widely publicized as the hero of Warsaw, has gone into the discard. He objected to the brutal methods of the SS in occupied Poland.

FIELD MARSHAL von Rundstedt appears to have been in the doghouse for some months following the autumn offensive in Russia. He seems to have quarreled with Hitler over the degree to which the German army should retreat before going into winter quarters.

Von Rundstedt proved indispensable, however, and suddenly appeared in the news again this spring.

The keynote speech which Adolf Hitler delivered to the assembled military top leaders in his Berchtesgaden mountain retreat a few days before the invasion of Poland began caused no end of shaking of heads and whispers of dismay.

One officer sitting in the rear of the large room where the officers' corps was assembled scribbled the text of this brief but blood-curdling address in shorthand on the cuff of his short. Some day I expect to be able to publish that text.

In it, Hitler puts himself on record as favoring the total war front in which women and children can be as little exempted as can civilian populations generally if caught between sections of the retreating army. He stated bluntly that he didn't mind being called Ghengis Kahn or Attila the Hun; history recorded these names as those of great doers. He urged the generals to be tough.

The Polish campaign proceeded with a fierceness and brutality unequaled hitherto, but Hitler was not satisfied. He wanted the soldiers and their officers not only to fight battles but also to make short shrift of the Polish population.

The army balked at this. So Hitler sent his uncompromising SS men to Poland to "clean up." They did—and countless are the stories told me by German officers themselves of acts of inhumanity committed by the Black Guards.

GENERAL VON BLASKOWITZ, on behalf of the army, protested against these methods. He has been in disgrace ever since.

The brutality of the SS in Poland is not the only objection which the regular army has against this special formation of Hitler bodyguards. The regular forces resent the preferred publicity given the exploits of the SS in the daily communiques; and they resent the "break" given the SS always to be in the final skirmish of a decisive strategic movement.

I need not quote a general on that—even the buck private feels that way about it.

Another point of friction between Hitler and the old-line generals has been the Nazi fight on the church. The old Prussian officer was used to going to church on Sundays and seeing army chaplains about him on the battle field.

ON DECEMBER 23, 1940, attended a Christmas celebration in the Berlin garrison. The colonel in charge had the soldiers sing all the traditional Christian Christmas songs like "Stille Nacht" and "Adeste Fideles."

To my somewhat surprised comment that this was rather unusual, he said:

"I'm not going to let anybody interfere with our celebrating Christmas in the good old Christian way. Others may decide to revive old pagan German customs for Yuletide; so long as I head this garrison it's a Christian Christmas for us—and I think the soldiers prefer it."

I for one certainly saw and heard them singing with deep emotion and reverence.

One hears again and again that the generals' corps is fed up and ready to throw the entire Nazi outfit out.

Such rumors, I believe, are too much the result of wishful thinking. For, however much a general may disagree with der fuehrer, he remembers his oath of allegiance.

Therefore, a generals' revolution, for the present at least, represents a myth and should be discounted as such.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

He's Here Again!

"How are you fixed?"

I looked up at the unexpected visitor. There was something about his voice.

"I got a nice line of stuff," he said.

Then, out of the past, I recognized the furtive manner, the low voice, the swarthy features.

"If you need anything I can take care of you," he whispered, looking around the office.

"Is it good?"

"Pre-Henderson," he said, with an air of pride.

"How much?"

"Fifty cents a gallon."

"A gallon or a fifth?"

"Well, to be honest, they're putting it out in fifths now."

"Do I look like Rockefeller?"

"I can get you some cheaper gas, but it's been cut.

* * * *

"I got some pretty good gas at 40 cents last week."

"It must of been doctored."

* * * *

"It seemed okay. The motor skipped a little at times, but nothing serious."

"Some of that stuff they're putting out will eat right through your pistons."

"I suppose so."

* * * *

"Where do you get the stuff you're offering?"

"I expected that."

* * * *

"No fooling. And I've got some that's been in a pumping station a whole year. It's never been touched. The owner died and it was tied up in an estate."

"Well, make it 45 cents a gallon and I'll do business with you."

"Okay, but you're moidering me."

"How'll I get it? Do you deliver?"

"Here's a card. Sign your name. It makes you a member of the Fun and Frolic Club, Inc. Drive your car to the address on the back. Ring the bell three times and ask for Tony."

"Okay. Thanks."

"Not at all. And if you need any tires ask Tony to introduce you to Mike."

A new meter reader was here the other day reading light meters. The regular meter reader had a light heart attack and couldn't make the works.

Interview With Flank

("Louis Tufano, owner of Market Wise, originally wanted only to buy a horse named Flank. The owner said he would throw in Market Wise for $500 extra, making a total price of $1500."—News item.)

Q—So you're the horse they threw Market Wise in with!

A—Must you drag that up again?

Q—Do you remember it?

A—I am always being reminded of it.

Q—At the time of the deal what did you think?

A—When Tufano offered $1000 for me I thought he must be looking for a race horse. When he took Market Wise, too, I thought he was just going to do a trained animal act.

Q—You realize how wrong you were?

A—Yeah, but think of the fellow who sold us!

A—I'm strictly the Forgotten Nag.

Q—Are you jealous of Market Wise?

A—No, he's a swell sport. He tries to soften my feelings.

Q—How?

A—He tells me we got mixed up; that he's really Flank and that I'm really Market Wise!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Anti-American Communist Party

THE WHITE HOUSE statement announcing the commutation of Earl Browder's prison sentence said he was liberated in the interest of national unity.

PEGLER

Browder, a native American, is chief of the Communist Party in the United States.

Representative Martin Dies often has been berated for charging that the party is a subversive or anti-American group.

If the Communist Party is subversive and anti-American then President Roosevelt has liberated the leader of a conspiracy against the Government, the peace and the lives of the whole American people.

But is the Communist Party anti-American?

The answer is given as an official document by Francis Biddle, attorney general and the highest law officer in the United States, in the Harry Bridges deportation case, as follows:

"The Communist Party of the United States, a section of the socalled Third International, was founded in 1919; and, after its name was changed several times, finally became 'the Communist Party of the U. S. A.' The Third International advocated the class struggle, which was described as entering the phase of Civil War in America. Illegal methods were also advocated, where necessary, to carry on its work; systematic agitation in the Army; the renouncing of patriotism; and the revolutionary overthrow of capitalism.

"THE 'AMERICAN SECTION' adopted a 'program' declaring: 'The Communist Party will systematically and persistently propagate the idea of the inevitability of and necessity for violent revolution and will prepare the workers for armed insurrection as the only means of overthrowing the capitalist state.'

"The Communist Party teaches the violent overthrow of existing governments, including the United States. This concept reaches back to the famous manifesto of Marx and Engels of 1848, which declares: 'The Communists openly declare that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions.'

"In the 'thesis and statutes of the Third International' (1920) this doctrine is expanded. 'The mass struggle means a whole system of developing demonstrations growing ever more acute in form, and logically leading to an uprising against the capitalistic order of government.'

"This and other documentary evidence . . . established that it is an organization that advises, advocates and teaches the overthrow, by force and violence of the Government of the United States.

"PENETRATION into trade unions was strongly emphasized in Communist literature and conversion of their members by constant agitation and propaganda. Reforms in the labor movement should be accepted as screens behind which revolutionary activities could be carried on. To carry out this program, 'factions' were organized within particular unions to advance the aims of communism behind the 'front' of education. The party was to engage in strikes and wage movements to war against class collaboration plans and to organize the unorganized.

"The party took control of the Workers Alliance as a medium through which to organize the unemployed. 'To develop militant class struggles' and 'to build the revolution' through association in a 'brilliant, class-conscious, unemployed organization.'"

Mr. Biddle also found that the American Youth Congress had been "identified" as a "Front" organization, or affiliate of the anti-American Communist Party, and said so.

Mrs. Roosevelt has shown marked sympathy with both the Workers Alliance and the Youth Congress, and Biddle cites, with approval, the finding of Judge Charles B. Sears, who recommended Bridges' deportation, that demonstrations of such sympathy warrant a conclusion that Bridges "followed this course of conduct as an affiliate of the Communist Party rather than as a matter of chance coincidence."

In Mrs. Roosevelt's case, there having been no comparable public inquiry, there is no direct evidence of "affiliation," but her own displays of that "sympathy" have been no less numerous, gratuitous nor hearty than his.

At any rate, within a month after Browder's release for the sake of "unity" among the American people, the organization of which he is the chief is denounced by the Attorney General, in words that might have been cribbed from Martin Dies himself, as hostile to the American Government and a foe of American patriotism even in the Army

Farm Women To Attend Parley At Md. U. June 17

Farm women from all sections of Maryland will attend the Homemakers' Day at the University of Maryland June 17, at which time one of the principal speakers will be Dr. Liu Chieh, counselor of the Chinese Embassy.

The program replaces the regular rural women's short course, a week-long affair called off this year because of a shortage of farm labor, and tire and gasoline rationing.

A special meeting of the State Council of Homemakers executive board will be held at the university June 16 when officers will be elected and directors and project chairmen appointed.

Miss Venia M. Kellar, assistant extension service director, said the annual short course was eliminated only after serious consideration of all factors and after many farm women reported they would not be able to attend for a full week.

Other speakers will include Dr. Paul S. Douglass, president of American University; George P. Waller, former consular or diplomatic officer in Europe, Asia, Africa, and Central America; Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university; Dr. T. B. Symons, dean and director of the extension service; Mrs. Edwin Fry, president of the Associated Women of the Maryland Farm Bureau; Mrs. Walter Kriel, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs; and Mrs. Algernon Carter, president of the State Council of Homemakers' Clubs.

Jap Subs Attack Three Ships Off Australia Coast

Allied Headquarters, Australia (Thursday), June 4 (AP).—Japanese submarines attacked two small cargo ships 35 miles east of Sydney and a third vessel 225 miles to the south, General MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

The communique did not disclose the results of the attacks which may hav been linked with the unsuccessful Japanese midget submarine raid on Sydney Harbor Sunday.

Meanwhile Allied bombers again attacked Rabaul, New Britain, where large fires were left in the wharf and military camp areas, the communique said.

Air Foundation Saves Another, Former Cripple, To Fly For U. S.

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—John Burtch tossed away his cane today and did an Irish jig—he's that happy to hear he's physically fit now to become a pilot with the U. S. Army Air Force.

A game leg had him down for awhile, but a group of World War I fliers arranged an operation that fixed him up as good as new. He'll be reexamined within a few days, and his doctors tell him he can pass the toughest physical.

Burtch, 22-year-old trombone player from Brooklyn, is one of more than 6000 young would-be pilots who have come to the American Flying Services Foundation for advice and help. The foundation has rehabilitated 2750 who now are in training for one of the U. S. flying services.

The foundation, supported by fliers and aviation enthusiasts in 160 cities, aims to correct deficiencies which bar young men from the flying services. Statistics show that 65 per cent of the applicants rejected have minor correctible disabilities—defective teeth, faulty vision, flat feet, or, like Burtch, an uncared-for injury.

Burtch's disability didn't seem minor to him a few months ago. He thought he was crippled for life.

While in training for the Air Force of an Allied Nation, he suffered a knee injury. After three months of hospitalization he still was limping around with a cane, and now and then he fainted from pain.

He asked for a discharge and came home to apply for ground crew work at Mitchel Field. Someone there told him about the foundation. On April 25, he talked to Dr. S. M. Strong, World War I veteran and the foundation's medical director. Two days later, he underwent an operation to remove a damaged cartilege from his knee, and on May 2 went home on crutches.

Now he's through with his cane. Before the flying bug bit him, Burtch played his trombone in a dance band.

Morgenthau Asks Tax Speed

By the Associated Press

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau expressed hope last night that the new tax bill pending in the House Ways and Means Committee would not be "too little and too late."

The Secretary's statement, in an address prepared for the mutual network, apparently was intended to prod Congressmen who have altered or rejected many points in the $8,700,000,000 program of new taxes which he has recommended.

"The people of this country have shown in a thousand ways that they are not in the mood for half measures, either financial or military," Morgenthau declared. "They will be critical only if the burdens are unfairly distributed. They will be disappointed in their leaders only if those leaders fail to ask them for all-out effort."

The Secretary inaugurated a series of weekly radio addresses by Government financial or economic officials concerned with the program to prevent an inflationary rise in the cost of living. The series is sponsored by the Office of Facts and Figures.

"I am in dead earnest when I say that any man or woman who chooses to go on a buying spree is committing an act of sabotage against our war effort," Morgenthau said.

Would-Be WAACs Now Total 2100; Today Last Day

Twenty-one hundred Washington women have besieged the Army recruiting office at Eleventh and New York Avenue Northwest to obtain application blanks for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, with a last-minute rush today expected to boost the local total to 2400.

Because of the large number of would-be WAACs all over the country, the War Department announced yesterday that 500 women will be chosen from each of the nine corps areas to receive physical examinations, instead of examining almost all applicants, as was originally planned.

The 500 will be chosen on the basis of higher ratings in mental alertness tests and in preliminary personal interviews. A second interview will be given to all who pass the physical. Final choice will be made by the War Department.

Applications should be addressed to the Army recruiting office in Baltimore, and must be postmarked today.

Crews Labor Late To Replace Main To War Buildings

Under the supervision of U. S. Army engineers, workmen were busy late last night in an effort to replace the 18-inch water main which broke yesterday afternoon in George Washington Memorial Parkway near Lee Boulevard.

As a result of the rupture, the water supply to Fort Myer, the National Airport, the Navy Building and the War Department building now under construction, was cut off from the District source at Key Bridge.

Grading machines of the Public Roads Administration working on the new road network leading from existing highways to the new War Department Building, are held responsible for the accident. A bulldozer, engaged in levelling operations, struck the main, splitting the pipe which, at this point, was close to the surface.

Officials at the Arlington Pumping Station last night said that the line would be in operation before morning.

Nazis Are Hungry, but Don't Show Signs Of Crackup, Warns Returned U. S. Doctor

Although "they're hungry all the time" and seem to be losing weight while you look at them, the German people don't seem to be on the verge of physical crackup as yet.

That was the opinion voiced yesterday by a Public Health Service doctor just returned from a Reich internment camp.

"Those who were young and strong in the beginning—before food rationing tightened up—seem to be taking the war pretty well," said Dr. Howard D. Fishburn, a medical attache of the American Embassy in Berlin when hostilities began.

"But it's not going so well with the aged and infirm. There is a great shortage of doctors. At Bad Nanheim, where 134 of us were interned after Germany declared war on the United States, we got a maximum of 1800 calories a day to eat. That isn't much but it was a lot more than the average German is getting."

Eldest Attache at 32

Dr. Fishburn, only 32, was the eldest of three Public Health Service men assigned to the Embassy in Berlin as medical inspectors, under international agreements, of British and Belgian prisoners of war. The other two—Drs. Charles G. Spicknall and William S. Baum—joined him in a press conference held here yesterday shortly after their arrival from New York. They came in Monday on the exchange ship Drottningholm.

Prevalence of typhus prevented them from visiting some prison camps, they said. In Berlin, however, public health was at a surprisingly high level, though the doctors admitted that at no time were they permitted access to sickness or mortality figures.

In the camps housing and clothing seemed good but food was inadequate. A big help, they said, were the Red Cross packages which prisoners were allowed to receive at regular intervals.

A Coloradoan, via Kansas, Dr. Fishburn had been in Germany continuously since September, 1938, when he was sent to the American consulate at Stuttgart to examine immigrants and enforce quarantine measures. Since last July, he had been a medical inspector in German prison camps.

Home at Hyattsville

Drs. Spicknall and Baum were ordered to Berlin in March and July of 1941, respectively. The former's home is in Hyattsville, Md. He was graduated from George Washington University Medical School in 1936. Dr. Baum, who lives in Connecticut, was graduated from Yale Medical School in the same year.

At Bad Nauheim, their common home for five months with American diplomats, foreign correspondents and others, the Public Health Service doctors found recreation in an occasional game of softball and listening to London news reports on a contraband radio.

"We weren't supposed to have a radio, but I think the Gestapo sort of shut their eyes—or ears—to it," said Dr. Fishburn.

Rank discrimination against Polish civilians was cited by Dr. Spicknall. On a visit to Posen, he was impressed by strongly enforced bans on Poles' use of park benches, restaurants and street cars.

Dr. Spicknall, incidentally, got himself engaged at Bad Nauheim. She is the daughter of an American businessman who himself found his future wife in Europe when we went to France in the World War I. The prospective bride's name, Dr. Spicknall bashfully confessed, is Gladys Anderson.

2 Sun Cab Officials Fined and Sentenced for Tax Evasion

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 3.—Two officers of the Sun Cab Co. were sentenced to prison today and heavily fined in Federal Court on charges of income tax evasion and conspiracy.

Herbert Glassman, company president, was sentenced by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut to five years' imprisonment and fined $10,000, and Joseph I. Zucker, auditor, drew a three-year term and $5000 fine. Chesnut also ordered that the defendants pay court costs. Both were convicted two weeks ago, but the court delayed sentence until today so the men could arrange business affairs.

Attorneys for the Sun Cab Co. also pleaded guilty today to an additional charge of tax evasion, and a $5000 fine was levied on this count.

The prosecution charged that Glassman evaded approximately $110,000 in taxes over a five-year period, and the cab company, an additional $22,932.

Zucker, convicted of aiding and abetting Glassman in the evasions, pleaded innocent today in three other cases. One was the charge against the cab company, another against the District Underwriters, Inc., and Edward C. Ostrow, third cab company executive; and the last count on his own income tax returns.

Ostrow pleaded innocent, as did the underwriting concern, which has been dissolved. These cases were continued for subsequent disposition.

Judge Chesnut said, in pronouncing sentence, that Glassman was a "forceful man with little formal education" but who, like many successful persons, probably paid little attention to adversaries who might get in his way.

Glassman Convicted In '29 on Liquor Charges

Glassman, who lives at 4839 Colorado Avenue Northwest, was found guilty of liquor conspiracy charges in August, 1929, when he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

At that time Glassman was proprietor of two garages, and was accused of bringing liquor into the District and using the garages as distributing centers.

Maxim Litvinoff

Soviet Ambassador to the United States

Says About

"MISSION to MOSCOW"

"IT CANNOT be expected from me, with my background (so different from Mr. Davies') that I should find myself in complete agreement with all his statements and surmises, more especially as I naturally have more inside knowledge of some of the facts. But this does not prevent me from stating that Mr. Davies has presented the facts to which he had access with the utmost precision and truthfulness, and that whenever he has been forced to move in the sphere of surmise and conjecture, he has, in most cases, got as near to the truth as was humanly possible. This makes Mr. Davies' book the most important contribution to the literature on the Soviet Union.

Keeping an impartial record of events, Mr. Davies finds himself in the ranks of those very few contemporary politicians who, as well as clearly foreseeing the ever growing danger of a new world war, recognized what were the few means available of averting this danger. Subsequent events have shown that many of Mr. Davies' forecasts were, in fact, prophecies, and so MISSION TO MOSCOW becomes required reading for students of those fatal blunders of international diplomacy, which were the cause of the great tragedy that has overtaken humanity.

The book is, moreover, remarkable in another way. A man new to diplomacy, finding himself in a new land, and that land new not only to him, but new to history and differing in its social-economic structure from all others, not only did Ambassador Davies not lose his head, but he found at once the right approach to the new phenomena, and more important still, people, thanks to which, as he himself testifies, he was very often able to succeed where the representatives of other countries failed. In this regard the book might be used as a handbook of diplomatic technique, in which trained diplomats, no less than novices might find much to enlighten them.

But the greatest value of the book seems to me to be that, by bringing the Soviet Union home to the American public through its pages, Ambassador Davies is continuing at home his misson to Moscow. And this mission—the creation of a better understanding between the two countries—acquires special importance now, when their peoples have become companions in arms, and will, after the fighting is over, be busied with common tasks or reconstruction."

Excess Weight Can Be Lost Through Care

Eliminate Fats In Your Diet as The First Step

By Ida Jean Kain

IT MAY BE perfectly true that you don't eat much. It may be a fact that you get fat on exactly the same number of calories on which somebody else stays beautifully slim. If so, the difference can be accounted for by your disposition and your metabolism. We'll say that you have an easy-going disposition—and that your thin friend hasn't. You wait for transportation while she races up stairs and escalators or sprints several blocks simply because she does not have the patience to wait for the bus.

What's more, you may be built for comfort rather than speed. If you are short and plump by design, you may burn as many as one-third less than the tall thin person who weighs the same as you do. Your proportion of active tissue is less and you burn fewer calories. Or, to put it another way, you have a greater percentage of fatty tissue as compared with total weight, and burn fewer calories. You may use only 16 calories per pound of body weight as compared with her 20 calories per pound.

"Dead Weight" Illegal

Once you appreciate that fat is really "dead weight," you begin to understand what you are up against. And it shouldn't surprise you to find that you tip the scales at 20 or so more pounds than the 130 to which you are legally entitled.

But you can turn your excess weight back into energy much faster than you accumulated it. If 20 pounds is all your excess, you can be slim again in 10 short weeks. If you go on a restricted allowance of 1030 calories per day, you can use up 2 pounds of fat each week. You might do it a bit faster, or slower. But that is a conservative estimate.

If you are short on will power and can't stick to such a restricted diet, allow yourself a more liberal calories intake of 1580 per day and jog along at the rate of 1 pound off each week. You'll get there.

Eliminate Fats

But do your calorie cutting mainly in the foods that are high in fat. They are the ones that turn the body fat most readily, and, also, they are the ones that count the most when left out of the menus. Here's why: Fats count two and one-third times as many calories as either proteins or carbohydrates. Want statistics? Well, 1 ounce of pure fat contains 255 calories; 1 ounce of sugar, 113 calories; 1 ounce of protein, 113 calories. You can see why it pays to restrict the cream, butter and gravy, French dressing and pastries, when you are trying to cut out calories.

But in your limited calories intake, you have to get a diet that is nutritionally adequate. Otherwise, your reducing doesn't really get you anywhere. You may lose all the weight you want, but you'll look haggard—and where's the percentage in that?

Powder Applying Requires Time

There's a trick to putting powder on your face. Ye average glamour girl just plunks a blob of the stuff on the end of her nose and considers her beauty duty done. No proper Hollywood star would be caught dead in such a state. But no. Powder for them is practically a ceremony. Jane Wyatt, making up for her role in RKO-Radio's "Army Surgeon," applied powder generously with a large, fluffy puff, carefully dusting it over her face from hairline to the base of her throat. This done, she brushed off all excess with a soft baby brush.

Powder, put on with care, will make your skin look smooth and fine, will stay on for hours. Which last point alone makes it worth the extra minute or two needed to apply it correctly.

Shoppers Can Help Save Tires

The day is gone when we could purchase a stickpin and say to the clerk, "Deliver it, please." With rubber and tire rationing, it is costly, wasteful and unpatriotic to have an enormous truck deliver a tiny package. Local merchants, together with the State Rationing Board, are appealing to women to rise to the defense cause so that strict rules will be unnecessary. They also make these further suggestions:

1. Please do not ask for special deliveries. This means the use of extra man power, extra gasoline, and extra equipment.

2. Keep from saying, "Take it back." If you are expecting a C. O. D. package, try to be there or make arrangements to have it paid for on the first delivery. Also avoid easy-to-make "approval" purchases.

3. Be a careful shopper. Give more care to making purchases. Returns mean lost man power which the Nation needs. If returns are necessary, however, help by returning the small packages in person.

4. Be at home on the first delivery. If you are to be out, arrange for someone to receive the package to avoid second deliveries.

Woman Asks Help With Two Problems: The Painful Shyness of Her Niece and Nephew, Comparable to Her Own, and Where to Learn Braille, as Eyesight Fails

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: There are two subjects about which I wish to write. The first concerns my niece and nephew, aged 18 and 20, respectively, who are afflicted with painful shyness. Their parents seem to feel they will outgrow this shyness in time; but knowing my own sufferings in that respect, I am concerned for their future welfare. I am still a spinster and although nearly 50, I have never yet achieved the poise and serenity that age supposedly brings.

It is only recently that I have come to live with them; but for years I paid them annual visits. Both youngsters are talented; but lack the "push" necessary for gaining friends and making their own way in life, as they will soon have to do. When I look about and observe the carefree spirit of other girls and boys, I can't help feeling an ache inside for these two—knowing how they long to unbend, be friendly and have friends.

In association with me, they are charming, intelligent young persons; but they involuntarily "freeze up" around others. Can you offer any recommendations that would help them feel more at ease with people generally? Both their mother and I have reserved, quiet natures; and since they are the serious, studious type, their mother thinks they are simply "running true to form." But I feel that something can and should be done to help them.

The second problem concerns myself. I am in danger of losing my eyesight and I desire to learn Braille. My doctor predicted this would happen, and I feel it is almost upon me. Can you tell me where I might study Braille? And, also, whether there is a possibility of warding off blindness by correct treatment? My doctor lives in another State; in my home town—and I plan to remain here so long as my eyesight permits me to continue working. Your advice on these problems will be much appreciated. CECILIA.

Moral Courage Gives Wings to Spirit

DEAR CECILIA: Eleanor Roosevelt's autobiography, "This Is My Story," should make helpful reading for your niece and nephew. It is doubtful whether any sensitive, intelligent, introspective person ever suffered greater agonies of shyness than she suffered (according to her own account), during childhood and adolescence. And the fact that she transcended this psychic handicap to become one of the most graciously unself conscious, poised and socially dynamic personalities in the history of women should suggest to your niece and nephew that no spirit need be "cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound to doubts and fears," if the heart wills otherwise.

To read between the lines of her story, and to study the record of her public service, is to perceive that Mrs. Roosevelt overcame her "painful shyness" not by concentrating feverishly upon its correction; not by trying to become popular or a "charmer;" but by dismissing herself from mind, in cultivating an expanding consciousness of others' needs in this far-from-perfect world; and in working seriously, conscientiously and on a continuously broadening, increasingly effective scale, to secure some improvement in the general welfare of mass mankind.

Anguished self doubting, self distrust or self deprecation may well be construed as "growing pains" of the soul—so Dr. Louis E. Bisch brilliantly argues, from the psycho-analyst's viewpoint, in his beguiling little book, "Be Glad You're Neurotic." It appears that the intensely sensitive person is fashioned by nature for a special destiny; that it is his privilege, if he claims it, to further man's evolutionary reach toward the stars. But to this end, his acutely sensitized mind and feelings must be diligently employed—though with painful effort—in promoting social good or spiritual awareness; never squandered in futile, morbid self analysis. Some biographical knowledge of the great personalities notable for their achievements in art, poetry, literature, music, medicine, philosophy, science, invention, etc., would reveal, I think, that the majority had been genius-marked with "shyness," to a pronounced degree.

Thus, I question whether your niece and nephew are to be pitied for lackin'a the commonplace, stultifying quality of complacent aplomb. 't seems to m., indeed, that they most need moral courage to be themselves; and the true conviction that in being, without apology, most fully themselves, they will most quickly attract the congenial company of their spiritual kind. Since they incline to be "serious and studious," yet are charming and attractive when not trying to "make an impression," (as they feel no need to do with you), they should be consistently encouraged by all who exert an influence upon them, to entertain the highest respect for their unique quality of thought and feeling; and to be serenely accepting of, rather than abashed by, their "difference" from run-of-mine persons. Only by adopting a detached, "take-or-leave-me" attitude toward themselves can they release their psychic energies for constructive application to the world in which they live—and, in so doing, set themselves to achieve the fullest measure of social approbation and soul satisfaction.

Precautionary Care May Save Vision

NOW, TO CONSIDER your problem: One must entertain a poor opinion of a physician who would burden a patient with the disheartening prediction, casually proferred, that eventual loss of eyesight was probable. Let us hope he is as wanting in diagnostic skill as he is in humane concern. Since you are now in Washington, it behooves you to take advantage of the first-class diagnostic service available here—either from private practioners; or from the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, at 1147 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

If your funds are limited, go to the Health Security Administration, 1823 L Street Northwest, and make arrangements to be treated at low cost at the Episcopal Hospital, mentioned above. The hospital's clinic hours are from 11:30 a. m. to 12 o'clock, every noon day except Sundays and holidays. This is the period during which patients are asked to report; although the clinic doctors remain on duty until all patients "checked in" during that half hour have been seen. If you would prefer private treatment by a specialist, I can give you by telephone (if you like) the name of an absolutely dependable man—brilliant, thorough and kindly—who undoubtedly would take your case for a reasonable fee. He works with the clinic staff at the hospital aforementioned, incidentally, which indicates the quality of service given there.

When patients have need to study Braille, local eye specialists direct them to the Society for the Prevention of Blindness, located at 839 Seventeenth Street Northwest. But as one specialist explained, this measure is adopted only after eyesight has failed—since the Braille student learns more quickly when dependent upon the sense of touch alone. This specialist also remarked that no conservative diagnostician would presume to forecast the outcome of a serious optical ailment, on the basis of his conclusions alone; but would insist on consultation with other experts—as his minimum obligation to the patient. And it is this type of precautionary care you should procure immediately.

Cotton Fabrics May Brighten a Room

Modern Budget Puts Emphasis on Inexpensive Touches

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

MAYBE the shortage of kitchen and laundry equipment and other heavy goods will prove a blessing in disguise to the average American home where so much money has been spent on expensive kitchen equipment that too little was left for living rooms, bedrooms and dining rooms—the real living quarters of the home. Maybe shortages will direct attention to another fault of many rooms—where too much of a limited budget has been spent on gadgets, gimcracks, cheap little ornaments, souvenirs and novelty flower holders.

Just how much there is going to be to refurbish with is a big question that nobody can answer accurately right now. Certainly there won't be enough for everybody's wants and needs. But according to the best information, there will be more fabrics available for refurbishing than there will be heavy goods. Not that shortages of fabrics aren't threatened too, because they are . . . with the Government needing looms to make materials for uniforms, mosquito netting sandbags, tarpaulins. But for the present and probably for the next few months there should be plenty of beautiful yardage for civilian use.

Fabric Futures

Stocks of silk are rapidly becoming exhausted, rayon is getting definitely scarcer and nylon is out for decorative fabrics. Cotton itself is still plentiful but spinning machinery and looms are needed for Government orders for duck and canvas and crash. Linen is still coming over from Ireland but prices are very high. Mohair is still available and may be used much more in the future; with curtailment of its use for automobile upholstery more mohair should be available for civilian use. At the present writing, lace net curtains are more plentiful than any other type of sheer curtain, but a yarn shortage may slow up production there before long.

There will be a lot of pretty nice things achieved by American women with made-overs when the scarcities really set in in earnest. Because every household has old curtains or old lengths of material that haven't seemed worth doing anything about as long as there was such abundance of new things to pick from. Now, though, it's going to become really important to make use of every bit of old fabric.

Most of whatever redecorating that is done in this ominous year will be with fabrics . . . with curtains coming in for the lion's share of the improvement budget. For window treatments really matter now, what with the threat of blackout and the prospect of being more limited as to changes . . . for a more refreshing effect can be achieved with fresh curtains than with almost any other change you could make. Often they give a room more of a lift than some other much more expensive decorative gesture.

For Blackouts

If blackouts are on your mind, here is a summary of possible solutions. Regular draperies wide enough to overlap, lined with light-tight black or dark material (something like sateen). With suitable arrangements for closing the cracks, draperies don't need to be black or even dark on either side to achieve light-tightness. There is a ready-made blackout drapery of glosheen sateen in a variety of lovely flowered patterns so that the effect won't be gloomy. This has tabs along the sides which fasten to hooks around the window frame; it also has snaps up the center placket and deep hems to slip heavy rods through to hold the drapery snug to the floor so it won't blow.

If you don't want to buy this, you can make a similar one. If you have trouble about light at the top, a cornice can protect there. Or you can buy various kinds of blackout blinds that fasten securely and don't blow open at the cracks—one of the best has metal tracks that it runs on . . . it is entirely out of the way and out of sight when not in use but is highly efficient when needed. A very simple practical blackout arrangement is a quilted pad that's black on the outside and white on the inside so it doesn't seem gloomy . . . it hooks snugly over the window and not only keeps out the light but protects against flying glass caused by concussion.

Here is a way that a window may shed its winter trappings and take on a new attractiveness for summer at small expense. The striped, cotton draperies make a simple window-framing decoration and may be kept spotless by washing when the summer dust soils them

Skin Needs Care in Summer

Hollywood, Calif.—Now's the time for sunning, more gardening, walking and bicycling.

"And now's the time," says Bette Davis, "to give your skin that extra care it needs because of its more frequent exposure to the sun."

Bette, who is now working in Warner Brother's "Now, Voyager," knows whereof she speaks, for it wasn't so long ago that Bette's skin and health suffered from an overdose of sun.

"First exposure to the sun calls for the most caution," Bette says. "A good protective skin lotion or a tanning agent should be applied. Then make the sunning short to begin with. Your skin flourishes under small doses of the sun, but long sieges are not only dangerous to your health (robbing you of energy and perhaps giving you sun-poisoning), but make your skin sore, swollen and painful (not to mention unsightly pink).

"Your second sunning is a matter of taking it gradually, too. You can take longer exposures, but be sure to keep the skin well oiled to prevent burning and drying.

"After you have acquired the desired tan, frequent oilings will keep it glistening and smooth. But if it is impossible to retain your tan because of not being able to get out into the sun very often, and you lose much of it, it is advisable to be just as careful on your next exposure. Treat your skin again as though it were getting out into the sun for the first time of the season."

Movie Star Serves Decorative Salad

Salad days are right around the corner—those warm days which demand a crisp, cool decorative salad with each dinner. Ginny Simms, movie actress, suggests this one which she serves in small individual bowls made of natural wood.

She "lines" each bowl with a crisp lettuce leaf, arranges on this a medium-sized tomato which has been quartered. Over this she pours a generous amount of French dressing (just oil, tarragon vinegar and a dash of salt), to which she has added the finely chopped tops of new green onions. Over it all she sprinkles finely chopped hard-boiled eggs, both yolk and white.

'It's Great—This Army Life,' Declares Prvt. Bill Batt, Now at Home on Leave

"ARMY LIFE? It's great! Never enjoyed anything more in my life. Busy every minute; something doing all the time; there's never a dull moment. I wouldn't change places with anybody in the world."

Pvt. William L. Batt, jr., was speaking. After three months at Camp Wheeler, Ga., he is in Washington for a brief visit with his parents, William L. Batt, of the War Production Board, and Mrs. Batt in their Georgetown home.

Planning to be here until Wednesday, Private Bill is making the rounds, seeing his old friends and selling the Army life to all possible recruits. "I tell you—it's great," he said yesterday, as he drew himself up to his full 6-foot-4, smiled, and looked mighty proud about it all when somebody observed that he looked as if a full-time service schedule agreed with him.

Accompanying him on his visiting tour yesterday morning was his attactive sister, Mrs. Robert Yarnell Richie, who is down from Montclair, N. J., to enjoy the current Batt family reunion, now centering around the soldier in the household.

From here Bill will go to Fort Benning, Ga., to enter the Officers' Candidate School, since he has already fulfilled all prerequisites. Someday—who knows?—there may be a General Batt in our Nation's Army.

If there is, you can be sure Bill will have climbed from rank to rank without benefit of special favors. Just take a look at the record thus far. He was serving as assistant to W. Averill Harriman in the U. S. Embassy in London when the first call for U. S. service volunteers was sounded. Doubtless, he could have kept that excellent job even after his number came up before the draft board. Or, he could have scurried back to Washington and started pulling political strings for a commission.

He scurried back all right—but only to sign up as a private. You can take the story up from there, while I continue to keep an eye on that soldier boy. He's going places . . . and on his own—I can tell you that. And, as he says, "It's great—this Army life."

Another Party-With-a-Purpose . . .

Dignitaries and a decoration will take over a part of the calendar this afternoon when a hand-picked group of official and social Washingtonians gather at the Chilean Embassy at 5:30 p. m. Yes, it's another party with a purpose, and merrymaking will be merely an aftermath of the ceremony for which the event has been arranged.

Playing the leading roles in the brief drama of the afternoon will be Chilean Ambassador, Rodolfo Michels, who will present to William Edward Knox of New York, the coveted Chilean Order of Merit. I don't know exactly what the citation is to be, but generally speaking, the decoration will symbolize the appreciation of the Chilean government for Mr. Knox's work in establishing a number of power plants in that country.

Speaking of one Knox reminds me of another—Mrs. Katharine McCook Knox, who returned yesterday from Carrollton, Ohio, where she recently attended a memorial ceremony at the famous McCook home.

Built by her grandfather, Daniel McCook, around 1830, the place has also been owned by General Crozier's family. Several months ago, however, it was purchased by the State of Ohio and is now a museum.

Having been out of town for some time—since she visited in Pittsburgh and other points in Ohio before stopping at Carrollton, Mrs. Knox has been away from Washington since before her son-in-law's first novel hit the stands. Richard Austin Smith is the author; the title is "Sun Dial," and my prediction is that this beautifully-written story of a Maine seafaring man will be making quite a ripple before long.

Even though the book is fiction, it includes an historical angle—one that ties up with the famous McCook family—for the hero's destroyer is number 252, the same number once borne by the "U. S. S. McCook," named for Mrs. Smith's great-uncle.

Mrs. Smith, incidentally, is the former Kathleen Knox, known to her friends as "Brownie." The book is dedicated to her. Both she and her husband are widely known here. He attended private schools here before entering Duke University, and both he and his wife have visited here frequently since they have been making their home in New York.

One Way to Squelch Rumors . . .

Stop-me-if-you've-heard-this Dept.: Looking through a sheaf of clippings collected during the last war, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie came across a bit of verse the other day that might well be widely quoted in Washington . . . If it were, perhaps the accusation that Our Town is little more than a "rumor factory" might cease to be voiced so frequently.

Anyway, the lines—which, incidentally, are much better if done in cockney—are as follows:

"Positive knowledge, have I none
But my aunt's sister's brother's charwoman's son,
Heard a policeman on the beat
Say to a man in Regent Street
That he knew a man, who had a friend, who had a son . . .
Who knew when and where this war would end!"

Seems the last line, particularly, was used everywhere to squelch any bit of rumor making the usual rounds . . .

"Positive knowledge, have I none," quoted a Capitalite over the teacups yesterday, "but I'd be willing to wager this war'll be over sooner than we expected—if," he added with a twinkle, "we can just keep those Cologne fires burning!"

Hume Wrongs Leaving Saturday

Washington friends—and they are many—of the retiring Canadian Minister Counselor and Mrs. Hume Wrong are distressed over the news that they will be leaving Washington on Saturday. L. B. Pearson, who has been serving as Assistant Undersecretary of State for External Affairs for Canada, will assume duties as Minister Counselor here this weekend.

Apparently, it's an old Canadian custom to have diplomats exchange posts ever so often, for while Mr. Pearson is taking over Mr. Wrong's office here, Mr. Wrong will be settling into Mr. Pearson's former job. It was something of the same type of arrangement that took the Wrongs away from Washington once before. They went to Geneva, where Mr. Wrong became Canadian Advisory Officer to the League of Nations, while Dr. Walter A. Riddell, who had been holding that post, came on to Washington.

"Of course we're sorry to leave the United States," said Mr. Wrong, speaking for both himself and his wife a few days ago. "But going home is going home, and our son and daughter are in Canada. The boy, Dennis, who will soon be 16; and the daughter Jean, 13, are both in school."

Katherine Elizabeth Pierce and Lewis Carlin Towers Are Wed

Harris & Ewing

MRS. LEWIS CARLIN TOWERS

Rites Take Place At Rodman Street Home of Parents

The home of her parents on Rodman Street was the scene of the wedding of Miss Katherine Elizabeth Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Pierce, who was married in a 7 o'clock ceremony last evening to Lewis Carlin Towers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Cain of this city. The Rev. Thomas J. Smith officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a square-necked gown of white dotted swiss made with an embroidery-trimmed bodice, puffed sleeves and a short, rounded train. Her fingertip veil fell from a pointed Swiss-embroidered coronet and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of daisies.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Perry H. Petersen, a sister of the bride, wore a similar dress. The flowers in her hair matched those in her colonial bouquet of assorted flowers. Richard R. Cooper served as best man and the ushers were Norman O. Houghton, an uncle of the bridegroom, and Perry Harold Petersen.

A reception took place after the ceremony, and later the couple left on a short wedding trip to the South. As her going-away costume the bride wore an aquamarine gabardine suit and luggage brown accessories. The couple will return to Washington to make their home.

The bride attended William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Va., and her husband attended Georgetown University.

Two Brides-Elect Will Be Honored Sunday Afternoon

Honoring two brides-to-be, Miss Mary Jane Kirby will be hostess "after 5 o'clock" Sunday at cocktails for a group of her friends from the younger set. The party will be at her apartment at the Broadmoor.

Sharing the spotlight at the fete will be Miss Sara Booth Miller, a sister debutante of Miss Kirby's last season, and Miss Betty Honicon. Miss Miller, who is the daughter of Mrs. William C. Miller, has not yet set the date of her marriage to Robert H. Beers, but Miss Honicon will be wed a week from Saturday to Frank Swadley. She plans a small ceremony in Leesburg.

Miss Kirby, who was registered years ago for Smith College, put all thought of going away to school out of her mind about a year ago, when she went out and found a full-time secretarial job. That and her intense interest in dramatics have contrived to make her days more than full.

Mr., Mrs. Hammonds To Be Honored

Introductions will be the order of the afternoon Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Hammonds, who have asked a few friends in during the cocktail hours to meet Mr. Hammonds' brother, Scott Hammonds, and Mrs. Hammonds, who recently came to Washington.

The party will take place at 1911 R Street, the home Mr. and Mrs. Hammonds have been living in since January. Luckier than the majority of newcomers to Capital town these days, were the Scott Hammonds, for when they arrived Tuesday night, they had a home waiting and ready for them. It is the house at 4300 Hawthorne Street, where the Oliver Hammonds used to live.

Mr. and Mrs. Hammonds—the "new" ones—came here from their home in Marshall, Tex., where he is in the oil business. The duties which bring him to Washington are with the Board of Economic Welfare.

Capt., Mrs. Adams Visiting Here From Fort Benning, Ga.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams have visiting them here their son and daughter-in-law, Capt. Emory S. Adams, jr., and Mrs. Adams.

Captain and Mrs. Adams will leave on Saturday to return to Fort Benning, Georgia, where Captain Adams is stationed with the paratroops. They arrived in Washington a week ago today.

Lieut. Hall and Bride in Georgia

Honeymooning at Sea Island, Ga., now are Lieut. Robert D. Hall, U. S. Army, and his bride, the former Miss Ann Elizabeth Carnahan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carnahan of Washington. After June 19 Lieutenant Hall will be assigned to duty at Fort Benning, Ga.

Only members of the family and a few intimate friends were present for the ceremony May 30, when the Rev. J. Hillman read the wedding vows at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church in a 4:30 o'clock service. Lieut. William A. McGregor, jr., U. S. Army, served as best man. A supper at Pierre's followed and then the couple left for Georgia. Mrs. Hall is a sister of Mrs. Janet C. McLaughlin of Washington.

Quezons Feted By the Bakers At Luncheon

The President of the Philippine Commonwealth and Mrs. Manuel Quezon were honor guests yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. George Baker entertained at a luncheon in the main dining room of the Mayflower Hotel. An informal party, guests gathered in the promenade for cocktails before going in to lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker, who make their home across the Bay in Piedmont, Calif., came to Washington on the train with President Quezon from San Francisco. They are now staying at the Mayflower. A lawyer, Mr. Baker has been handling the business affairs of Colonel Soriano in this country.

In the luncheon group yesterday were the Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, Count Czernin, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Andreas Soriano—he is a Philippine cabinet member, the director of finance—Homer Cummings and Mrs. C. V. de Roces.

Priscilla Wood Is Engaged

Col. and Mrs. Charles Adams Wood of Boston, Mass., and York Cliffs, Me., announce the engagement of their daughter, Priscilla Adams Wood, to Robert Earle Ronayne of Worcester, Mass.

Miss Wood is the daughter of the former Miss Amelie Pilson and a granddaughter of Mrs. Benjamin F. Pilson of Washington. She attended the Beaver Country Day School at Chestnut Hill, Mass., and Holton Arms School in Washington.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Roger Norton and the late James Ronayne of Worcester, Mass., and is attached to the 113th Chemical Company, U. S. A. He is stationed at Grenier Field, Manchester, N. H.

Cyra Morehouse and Lieut. Kuhlmey To Be Married

A quiet ceremony in the presence of just the two families will mark the nuptials of Miss Cyra Morehouse and Lieut. Walter Trowbridge Kuhlmey Saturday in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Peter Marshall will officiate at 3:30 p. m.

After the ceremony a wedding reception will be held at the home of Mr. Kuhlmey's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ford Nesbit. The bride-elect has just completed her junior year at Vassar, and before Lieutenant Kuhlmey was called to active duty in the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., he was a second year man at Yale Law School.

Coming from New Haven, Conn., for the wedding will be the bride's parents, Prof. and Mrs. Andrew Morehouse, and her brother, Michael Morehouse. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kuhlmey, parents of the prospective bridegroom, have come from Chicago for the occasion. Lieutenant Kuhlmey is a grandson of Mrs. Walter Trowbridge of Washington. His brother, George Kuhlmey will be best man.

Also from out of town will be Miss Agnes Strauss of New York, who will be maid of honor; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Parsons of Evanston, Ill., and a group of Vassar girls, classmates of Lieutenant Kuhlmey from the 1940 class at Yale and a number of his fellow officers at Quantico.

Littles Give Dinner

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McCarthy Little entertained at a small dinner last evening in their home in Georgetown. General and Mrs. Little had returned earlier in the day from a short visit to New York.

Dr. Parra Perez Arrives; Will Face Full Schedule

The first day of the Capital visit of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Venezuela, Dr. Carraciolo Parra Perez, was a fairly quiet one, but from now until Sunday, when he leaves Washington, the Venezuelan statesman will be kept busy going from one event in his honor to another.

Arriving at Union Station early yesterday afternoon—his train scheduled for 12:30 was late—Dr. Parra Perez was whisked over to the Mayflower. He and his party had flown from Caracas to Miami and came by train the rest of the way. Accompanying him were the Secretary of Agriculture, Dr. Rodolfo Rojas, the President of the Central Bank of Venezuela; J. M. Herrera Mendoza, the chief of the Presidential Cabinet; Enrique Gil Fortoul, Julio de la Rosa and Jose Joaquin Gonzales Gorrondona, two secretaries from the Foreign Affairs Division, and Manuel Perez Guerrero and Antonia Davilla, secretaries to the minister of agriculture.

A career diplomat, Dr. Parra Perez will start his social program today by attending a luncheon at the Pan American Union and a meeting of that organization. Tonight, the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles will give a dinner in his honor at his home at Oxon Hill, Md.

The British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, will entertain at a luncheon at the British Embassy in honor of the visiting statesman tomorrow and tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock the Undersecretary of War, Robert Patterson, will be host at a dinner in the East Room of the Mayflower for Dr. Parra Perez.

Saturday Dr. Parra Perez has a schedule that calls for split-second timing. He will be honored at a luncheon at the Carlton by the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull. The Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante have asked in a large group of Washingtonians to meet Dr. Parra Perez from 5:30 to 7:30 that afternoon and at 8 o'clock that evening, the much-feted Foreign Minister and the members of his party will be honored at a dinner to be given by the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller.

After this round of festivities, Dr. Parra Perez and his party will leave on Sunday for a trip to Buffalo and Detroit, after which they will go to New York about June 10. No return trip to Washington is on his schedule, for Dr. Parra Perez plans to return to Venezuela from New York.

Dwight Davis, former Secretary of War and donor of the famous Davis Cup, will open the Exhibition Tennis Match to be held at the Edgemoor Club on Saturday at 3 o'clock.

Ruxton, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Col. and Mrs. John McClure, Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz.

In a double-ring ceremony in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church yesterday, Miss Mary Windsor Burklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reyburn Burklin, became the bride of Lieut. John D. Eyler, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dechert Eyler of Baltimore, Md. The Rev. Hillman Hollister officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of antique satin made with a chantilly lace bodice, caught at the sweetheart neckline with orange blossoms. Her full-length veil of illusion, held in place by a coronet of seed pearls, fell the length of the court train. Her shower bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Rappleye Is Matron of Honor

The matron of honor, Mrs. Robert D. Rappleye, wore with her blue marquisette skirt a bodice of matching lace, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline. She wore a yellow rose in her Dutch cap of blue lace and carried a bouquet of yellow roses in her blue-mitted hands. Miss Betty Burklin, the maid of honor, wore a similar blue ensemble. Her flowers were yellow roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Gretchen Hill, Miss Betty Freyburger, Miss Elizabeth Knott and Miss Jean Walker, wore dresses like those of the honor attendants—two in blue and two in yellow. Their bouquets were of mixed spring flowers. Little Miss Barrie Walker was the flower girl. She wore a pink frock and sprinkled rosebuds from her basket of flowers.

She is a member of the Chevy Chase Junior Women's Club and of the D. A. R. and Junior Assembly. Her husband was graduated from the University of Maryland.

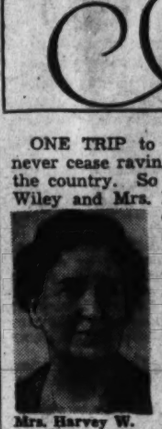
Mrs. Wiley and Mrs. Fulton To Tell Club Women Of Trip to Mexico City

ONE TRIP to Mexico—and the travelers never cease raving about the enchantment of the country. So it is with Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Mrs. Horace K. Fulton, who recently returned from a short sojourn in Mexico City. Tonight both will relate their experiences first hand to members of the Woman's City Club in the first of a series of Thursday evening programs arranged by Miss Lottie L. Anderson.



Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley

To give atmosphere, Mrs. Wiley and Mrs. Fulton will wear native Mexican costumes. There also will be guitar and mandolin music—South American tunes—played by Miss Helen Bruderer, Miss Doris Bruderer and their brother, Conrad Bruderer.

Those serving as hostesses in addition to Miss Anderson are: Mrs. Frederic I. Swift, Mrs. Gladys B. MRS. LORENZO DOW GASSER, wife of General Gasser, who is chairman of hostesses for the canteen which the American Women's Voluntary Services operates for officers, enlisted men and civilian workers in the Munitions and Navy buildings at Constitution Avenue and Twenty-first Street, gives out these instructions to members of her corps:

"Don't get mad. No one ever does anything to be proud of when she is mad. Remember, the other person is just as hot and tired as you. Friends are never made but often lost by losing one's temper.

"Do not eat or smoke when on duty. If you must do either, get someone to relieve you at your post while you sit down at a table.

"No women members of the canteen or women workers are allowed to sit at table in the Officers' Club.

"Do not hold unnecessary conversation with patrons. They are in a hurry and do not expect entertainment.

"Hostesses are to make any complaints directly to me.

"Do not wear jewelry with uniforms."

Canal Defenders Intensify Alert: Passes Canceled

Balboa, C. Z., June 3 (A).—United States Army authorities announced today, coincident with receipt of news of the Japanese attack on Dutch Harbor, that the alert status in the Canal Zone had been intensified since last night.

All local leaves and passes were cancelled in order to keep military and naval personnel in close proximity to their action posts.

Military officials said the move was precautionary and in line with similar measures taken in the United States. It was recalled also that Secretary of War Stimson warned recently that retaliatory measures might be expected in reprisal for the United States bombing of Tokyo in April.

21,000 Home Units Assured Lumber Here

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

With accent on Washington, the War Production Board yesterday relaxed its lumber-freezing order sufficiently to permit completion of about 105,000 "essential" housing units—54,039 of them publicly financed and 51,350 started by private builders.

Nearly 21,000 of the units are in this metropolitan area, 9798 in Washington itself, where a combination of factors—including a current conference deadlock in Congress—have conspired to keep the actual war housing program lagging far behind the hopes and promises.

Some Developments Listed

Housing units permitted lumber under the WPB order include: McLean Gardens, 1863 units, under construction on Wisconsin Avenue; a dormitory for colored women, 297 units, at Third and U Streets Northwest; Seminary Heights, 3550 units, Arlington County; Naylor Gardens, 750 units, in Southeast Washington; James Creek Dwellings, 278 units, in Southwest Washington, and 3000 demountables to be located near the city's center.

Planned projects that failed to get the necessary approval were: Langley Village, 2500-unit development scheduled by the Defense Homes Corporation for Chillum, Md., and 1500 demountables scheduled by the Alley Dwelling Authority. Included in the latter is a 800-unit demountable project planned near Garrett Park, Md.

Officials of the National Housing Agency were confident last night the the unfreezing order meant completion of the units, believing an adequate amount of utilities and metal could be secured to make the units livable.

A total of 11,000 units under construction or ready for construction by private builders were allowed for this vicinity. Rufus S. Lusk, building authority, said 6500 units are under construction now.

Other Dormitories Held Up

Although completion of the 21,000 units will be a help, erection of the promised temporary dormitories for 15,000 Government girls admittedly would solve the problem quicker. Plans for the dormitories have been completed and it is much easier to get priorities on temporary buildings than permanent ones—but the 50 million dollars authorized for this venture is held up in Congress. The House slashed the amount to $29,500,000 and the Senate raised it up to $42,500,000. Neither questioned the dormitory need, and the National Housing Agency is no longer interested especially in getting funds for separate houses—since the WPB is not expected to permit their construction.

Housing officials would be happy to have the 12 million dollars for dormitories. "Community facilities" such as waterworks, streets, hospital extensions and schools would be built with $17,500,000 of the money.

Hearings on the bill to authorize expenditure of 600 million dollars for war housing under the Lanham Act will begin Tuesday morning, it was announced yesterday. The District is not expected to share in this money, however.

Zone Board Approves Changing Leiter Mansion Area to Allow Apartments

Approval of the rezoning of the block bounded by Dupont Circle, Nineteenth, Q Streets and New Hampshire Avenue, requested by the Leiter interests from residential to apartment house usage was given by the Zoning Commission yesterday.

The Leiter mansion on the south end of the block, overlooking Dupont Circle is now occupied by the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics.

Opposition to the change was voiced at the hearing by adjacent property owners, including Mrs. Kenna Elkins, and representatives of the Women's National Democratic Club, who have homes in the same block on the east side of New Hampshire Avenue.

Four other applications for minor rezoning changes were also approved.

Proposed amendments to existing buildings regulations, which would require parking space to be included in all new residential construction—private dwellings, apartments, clubs and hotels was also taken under consideration.

These would compel each single-family residence to provide a parking space on its lot of not less than 200 square feet, to accomodate two cars, if needed.

Under the proposals, apartments, tenements and flats in "A" areas would be required to have one parking space for each two-dwelling units; "B" areas, one for each three; "C" areas one for each four; and "D" areas one space for each five dwelling units.

Clubs, hotels and boarding houses would be required to supply a parking space for each ten units.

Representatives of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Federation of Citizens Association, and the report of the Zoning Advisory Council approved the amendments.

Federal Control Of State Jobless Setups Opposed

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee recommended yesterday that Congress take action to allay fears of some State officials that State unemployment compensation and employment service systems would be federalized.

The committee sanctioned federalization during the war, but insisted that provisions be inserted in a pending money bill to make clear that the services were to be returned to the States when peace comes.

Traffic Accidents Decline in May

A 30 per cent decrease in District traffic accidents for May, 1942, as compared to May of last year was reported yesterday by William A. Van Duzer, traffic director.

Main reason for the decrease—from 1426 for May, 1941 to 956 for May of this year—was the gas and tire rationing which kept a considerable number of autos out of traffic, Van Duzer said.

Traffic fatalities remained unchanged, with six recorded for each month, he said.

Uncle Sam not only asks you to appreciate what you CAN have . . . he also asks you to take care of it! So you'll want to study these instructions carefully . . . how to care for the new Lancrest rayons . . . to make them look their best and wear longest!

LANSBURGH'S—Exclusive Hosiery—Street Floor

Are rayons pretty? Well-made rayons have that sheer, dull, cloudless beauty you've loved in silks.

Will rayon twist and wrinkle? The new rayons are processed to increase their clinging and fit.

Does rayon wear well? New rayons are specially processed to increase snag-resistance.

Slightly sissy — when wet—is rayon. Also it's a bit more easily snagged. Remove all your rings before you wash your stockings.

Long stretch. The rayon stocking has more stretch when it is on your leg . . . so you will want to buy it in a slightly shorter length.

Take your time! Rayon hose WON'T dry in 12 hours . . . allow from 24 to 48! You'll need 3 pairs at least!

A gentle squeeze. That's the way to wash them! Don't rub or wring . . . don't soak them, use a lukewarm suds.

'Clown' Bandit Slain in Effort To Rob Bank

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—A reckless robber who looked more like a circus clown than a desperado stalked into one of the Nation's largest banks today in a foolhardy foray that was terminated quickly by a burst of gunfire which left him dead on the marble floor and sent two guards to a hospital with bullet wounds.

The slain bandit was identified by investigators as Henry Karstens, alias James "Shrotgun" Cummings, a former convict.

Scene of the bizarre attempt to snatch a share of the huge fortune stacked in drawer and vault was the banking department on the second floor of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. on La Salle Street in the loop financial district.

The time was shortly before 1 p. m., when the room teemed with scores of patrons transacting business under the eyes of some of the 100 marksmen employed to protect as much as two million dollars in cash the institution sometimes has on hand.

Karstens used a white stocking cap, slitted for the eyes, as a mask for his powdered face. His hands were encased in rubber gloves. He wore a topcoat over a hunting jacket. Suspended from his neck was a valise. In bag, belt and pocket were 150 shells and bullets. a pistol and a knife. He carried a shotgun under his arm.

Witnesses gave this account of the fantastic affair:

The gunman walked toward a cashier's wicket near the head of the stairs leading up from the street entrance. John Whelan, a guard, approached. The robber told him:

"Drop your gun."

Whelan ignored the order. Another guard, Thomas Lyons, stole up from behind with his revolver in hand.

The masked man, trapped, wheeled on Lyons and pulled the trigger of his shotgun. It failed to discharge, so he banged it against a wall and produced his pistol.

Men and women in the mammoth room scurried behind pillars and stumbled under desks while bullets whined and whizzed.

When the firing ceased, Karstens lay dead. Whelan was wounded in the jaw and shoulder and Lyons in the neck. They were rushed to a hospital.

Paulette Divorced Chaplin In Mexico, L. A. Paper Says

Decree by Mail Will Dissolve Ties With Comedian

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 33.—The Evening Herald and Express said today it had learned "from confidential and reliable sources" that Charles Chaplin and Paulette Goddard were divorced in Juarez, Mexico, last week.

"Miss Goddard was not required to appear in court in the Mexican border city when the decree was granted," the newspaper said, although she had previously established legal residence in Mexico.

"She merely registered as the plaintiff with the court and the divorce decree will be forwarded to her through the mails within a few days. So secretive was the action that an entry of the decree has been ordered removed from the record by the Mexican jurist who issued it."

The marriage of the pioneer actor and the actress has been confirmed by them, but they have consistently refused to say where or when it took place. Hollywood believes they were wed in 1936, when she was a virtual unknown.

Coming to D. C. Today

New York, June 3 (AP).—Paulette Goddard, celebrating a birthday anniversary tonight at El Morocco night club with Woolworth Donahue, dime store heir, and Winston Guest, polo player, refused to discuss reports that she had been divorced from Charlie Chaplin.

Miss Goddard said she planned to go to Washington tomorrow to appear in an Army show.

Brief News Stems Off The Wires

The news wires reported these incidents yesterday:

In Marblehead, Mass., Air Raid Warden Alexander Cameron, emerging from a house that failed to douse its lights during a blackout test, had his pants snatched by a German police dog.

In Long Beach, Calif., robbers who a month ago injured one of Nicholas Periseck's fingers so badly in trying to remove a ring that the finger had to be amputated robbed him again yesterday and cut off one of his toes. Said the robber leader: "You told the cops about that other job. We'll give you something to remember us by."

In Denver, a judge told nine men convicted of gambling to contribute a total of $75 to Chinese relief or pay a fine of $50 each. The defendants, Japanese all, chose the bargain rate.

In Marion, Ohio, a pheasant flew through the win shield of Fred Maag's automobile, and then a bee found the hole and came in, too. Maag escaped (1) flying glass when the pheasant struck, (2) bee sting, and (3) injuries when he overturned the car fighting off the bee.

In Santa Ana, Calif., every householder will be his own street sweeper henceforth by municipal order. The reason: Shortage of parts for the city's equipment.

In Seattle, Daniel McDonald made a quick grab to help a friend who had stumbled. Down went MacDonald, himself, and broke his leg.

In Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. John Nuter, worried over the safety of a sailor son, received a letter from him assuring them of his safety. The mother still was talking about the good news, when the youngest of her three sons, James, 4, stepped out of the house and accidentally was shot by a neighbor boy playing with a rifle. The boy died two hours later.

At Nantes, France, members of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra took their seats ten minutes before a scheduled 8 p. m. concert. At 8, the hall, seating 3000, was empty. Two hours later some 300 "music lovers" had been rounded up and the concert began. But cat-calls and boos from the audience soon brought an end to what was probably the briefest performance ever staged by the orchestra.

U.S. Plays Lead Role in Pacific, Evatt Says

By International News Service

Australian Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt said last night that the United States has "accepted the primary responsibility" in the United Nations' war against Japan.

Evatt, who has just returned from a month's return in Great Britain, qualified his statement with the remark that Britain is not shirking its war duties in the Pacific theater.

Expressing general satisfaction for the progress made in preparing Australia's defenses, Evatt warned that the United Nations must not rest on what has been done but exert continuous efforts "at least to hold Japan in check."

"The position," he said, "is simple. If Australia were strongly attacked, Britain and the United States would immediately rush to repel the invader.

"But action taken at once, especially in relation to air defense, may save a far greater expenditure of resources later."

Evatt accompanied the request that additional air power be given Australia with the assertion that every combat aircraft sent to the Southwest Pacific will be "at once" utilized against the enemy.

The British government was said by Evatt to realize the crucial importance of checking any further Japanese thrusts in the Southwest Pacific area since their occurence was considered to affect not only Australia but the strategy of the World War as a whole.

"With an enemy so powerful as Japan," Evatt concluded, "we dare not ease up in any way or take any avoidable risk.

"Important tactical victories have already been gained north of Australia by the combined American, Australian air forces. The Battle of the Coral Sea gave American naval forces the opportunity to strike delaying blows to the Japanese, in a truly magnificent performance. These victories can be repeated and consolidated."

Prosecutor Takes Stand At Oden Trial

An unusual bit of legal procedure was introduced into the murder trial of Guy E. Oden in District Court yesterday when Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin suddenly called to the stand a new witness—the Government's prosecutor in the case, Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius.

The unexpected move, intended to show that the prosecution had not given Laughlin an opportunity to use a witness originally called by the Government, forced Margolius momentarily out of his role as attorney in the case. A ten-minute recess was called as the prosecutor, now turned witness, left the courtroom to enlist another assistant U. S. Attorney as his counsel for the duration of his testimony.

In answer to questions put by his adversary, Margolius testified that he had subpoened George L. Lawson, a neighbor of the victim, to his office, but had not discussed the case with him. Lawson is said to have been one of the first to enter the house at 114 O Street Southwest, after he and Mrs. Marion V. Stuart, another defense witness heard shots there.

Other testimony for Oden yesterday was given by Lawson's wife, Mrs. Stuart, and Mrs. Lilliam B. Klam, the mother of the 20-year-old former theater usher accused of shooting to death his 15-year-old girl friend, Ellen Reed Cannon, on July 19.

Oden won a new trial last October on the basis of incorrect testimony regarding the marital status of Mrs. Helen Yates, the dead girl's sister.

Laughlin said late yesterday he would put Lawson on the witness stand to describe the scene he found as he entered the house where the shooting had occurred only a few minutes before.

Schools Urged To Enlist Youths For Farm Work

By the Associated Press

Recommendations for recruiting thousands of high school youths to help relieve farm labor shortages, including a suggestion that this work experience might be credited toward diploma requirements, were sent by United States Education Commissioner John W. Studebaker yesterday to 40,000 State and city school officials.

Studebaker said that if such a farm army was to be mobilized in sufficient numbers to meet the demand "youth must be convinced that their services are urgently needed."

"They should be informed about farm living conditions, the kind and amount of work that will be expected of them, the compensation they will receive in return, plus meals, laundry, lodging and the like," he said.

Lutherans Dedicate Building

Dedication of the Lederer Memorial Building yesterday highlighted annual Founder's Day exercises at the National Lutheran Home for the Aged, Eighteenth and Douglas Streets Northeast.

Members of the United Lutheran Church from neighboring States attended. The new building is the residence of the Rev. Robert L. Lang, pastor and superintendent of the home.

The Rev. Dr. Raymond E. Sorrick, of Baltimore, president of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church, praised the "ministry of Christian kindness" which he said the home exemplifies.

The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, lauded the work of the late Rev. Dr. John R. Weidley, superintendent of the Home and chairman of its board of trustees from 1906 to 1940, and for 33 years Reformation pastor.

Also eulogized were the late Dr. Harry T. Domer, home treasurer from 1909 to 1941, and a lay official of St. Paul's Lutheran Church here, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Lederer, of Baltimore, who bequeathed $25,000 to the home in their wills. Dr. Lang praised the service record of Sister Mabel Stanley, of Allentown, Pa., for 24 years home matron, who attended the exercises.

*X THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1942 17

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Navy has extended the "freezing" of a number of its civilian employes here for another 30 days. The Navy staff was ordered "frozen" here on April 15 for 45 days by Secretary Knox. But on June 1—the date the hiring ban was to be lifted—the "freeze" was continued until July 1. Meanwhile, Navy officials and supervisors are going over the work in each office with the view of eliminating as much as possible for the duration. Employes and officials alike are urged to make suggestions for the betterment of the service and those who make constructive recommendations about the elimination of work will be rewarded by promotion. Other departments would do well to look into Navy's experiment which is producing results.

The President's overtime pay bill is headed for plenty of changes. Congressional sentiment is strong for a bonus bill but some committee members and employe representatives are smart enough to know that the President will never approve the $300 bonus bill that would add an estimated 600 million dollars annually to the Nation's debt. The bonus bill is all inclusive and it would even give Congressmen themselves a $300 bonus. That is political dynamite and the members should not have to be reminded of it. The President's overtime bill, however, makes no effort to cover 190,000 Federal workers. Roughly 130,000 of these are low-paid postal employes who have a measure of influence with every Congressmen.

It would be wise for the Administration to make this an omnibus bill that would correct the many inequalities in the Federal service. One of the purposes of the bill is to right numerous wrongs, and some provision should be made in it to take care of all low-paid employes. The bill should cover an annoying situation at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing where men are given a 15 per cent differential for night work and the women are not. Every single member of Congress has been showered with letters and telegrams in support of the bonus bill because the proposal is direct and easy to understand. And more than a score have appeared before the House Civil Service Committee in support of it.

Edgar B. Young, Budget Bureau personnel director, summed up the Administration's bill's objectives by testifying that it would (1) correct the many inequalities in the rates of pay of Federal workers, (2) that it would increase the earning of employes paid less than $3800 and thereby help them to meet rising living costs, and (3) that it would help meet the manpower shortage by forcing the Federal service to get along with fewer people, and by requiring employes on the job to do more work by working them longer hours. "I don't see how we're going to meet the manpower shortage," Young said, "by continuing to work a 44-hour week in Government."

The budget official opposed a suggestion that all Federal workers be placed on a 48-hour week. He argued that the way should be left open to go beyond a 48-hour week when the need arises. On the other hand, he testified that there was no need now for some postal employes to be placed on a 48-hour week. He admitted, however, that if the overtime pay bill were approved there would be a tendency to place the Government on a six-day, 48-hour week but he insisted that the discretion to raise or lower "official" working hours should rest with department heads. He said there were some agencies that would now go on a 48-hour week if it were not for the Saturday half holiday law that requires compensatory time off for Saturday afternoon work. The overtime bill would suspend that act for the duration. It is already suspended for the War and Navy departments.

Chairman Ramspeck suggested that an amendment be added which would require a minimum 44-hour work week throughout the Federal service. Such an amendment, he pointed out, would guarantee all employes paid under $3800 some benefit. Young said the Budget Bureau would make a report on the amendment. Representative Rees of Kansas, implied that he favored an out-and-out six-day 48-hour week throughout the service. Young explained that the Administration bill would authorize overtime for an estimated 725,000 employes. Nearly 1,100,000 Federal workers are now eligible for overtime pay.

G. W. U. Graduates 600, Honors Six Famous Alumni at Colorful Commencement

George Washington University last night awarded degrees and certificates of graduation to approximately 600 students, publicly acknowledged the achievements of six illustrious alumni and conferred honorary degrees upon Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, military aide and secretary to President Roosevelt, and William Tyler Page, minority clerk of the House of Representatives.

The university's 121st commencement exercises were held in Constitution Hall, where President Cloyd Heck Marvin, in his brief charge to the graduates, said that this day, to some people "without your resources is with very hopelessness imbued. Freedom, in which hope and faith grow strong, is sorely challenged, and life becomes cruel, appalling and confused.

"But you, armed with the spirit and liberty of true learning, know that in every period of travail, industry is more than idleness, learning is more than ignorance, faith is more than fear, hope is more than despair, and love is more than hatred.

"In this belief," he concluded, "there is support for us until thralls are free and men are brothers in a world of intelligence and hope."

President Marvin presented the school's Alumni Achievement Awards to six former students, citing each for "service to the university" and for outstanding achievement in varied fields of endeavor.

The recipients, and the work for which they were cited, were Alexander W. Weddell, of Richmond, Va., recently retired Ambassador to Spain, diplomacy; Dr. Luther Halsey Reichelderfer, of Washington, noted physician and administrator, trustee of the university since 1933 and a former District Commissioner, medicine; Watson Davis, of Washington, director of Science Service, science.

Also, Harold Franklin Enlows, of Washington, national director of first aid for the Red Cross, practical humanitarianism; Dr. Nevil Monroe Hopkins, former professor of chemistry at the university and developer of long-range naval and anti-aircraft guns, now on active duty with the Navy, science, and Elizabeth Webb Wilson, of Cambridge, Mass., the first woman to be seated at the International Actuarial Congress, actuarial science.

Gen. Watson Cited

In conferring honorary doctorates of law upon Page and General Watson, President Marvin cited the former's long service as an officer of Congress and his "valued advice on governmental procedure. To him life and friendliness are one," the citation said.

General Watson's citation read:

"Born in Alamaba, reared in Virginia; a tireless and powerful personal force binding men together in helpfulness; discriminating leader who constantly maintains a justly proportionate attitude toward life; able soldier; general officer in the Army of the United States."

Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Surgeon General of the Navy and White House physican, was scheduled to receive the honorary doctor of science degree but was in New Orleans yesterday. The degree likely will be presented to him at a special convocation when the university's medical school opens its summer session in about two weeks.

In addition to the presentation of alumni awards and honorary degrees, the university raised Gilbert Lewis Hall, professor of law and a member of the faculty since 1920, to the status of professor emeritus, "the highest recognition that can be given by the university." A similar honor was planned for John Wilmer Latimer, professor of law and a member of the faculty since 1908, but he was unable to attend the exercises and it was stated that the presentation would take place later. Professors Hall and Latimer are retiring.

McNutt Orders 2 Officials Removed at Freedmen's

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt's decision to replace at least two of the top administrative officials at Freedmen's Hospital, a move suggested several days ago in partial disclosure of findings of a General Accounting Office investigation of the hospital, yesterday was made public by the House Appropriations Committee.

The committee disclosed that McNutt last Wednesday advised Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren of steps to be taken to remedy "all of the manifestly inept and irregular processes within the hospital." McNutt declared that "determinate action has been reached to proceed as follows" in reorganization of the hospital's staff:

1. That Dr. T. Edward Jones, the hospital director in chief, "be permitted to separate himself from the service by way of a voluntary retirement" with the position to be assumed by the dean of the Howard University medical school.

2. That Dr. Lawrence W. Jackson, the assistant director, "be separated from the service by resignation or by disciplinary action in the event he refuses to resign." Dr. Jackson was named in the GAO report of its investigation in connection with charges of "ambulance chasing" and fee splitting.

Third Officer May Go

Referring to reports also made on the hospital by the Public Health Service and the Federal Security Agency, McNutt assured Warren that "the seriousness of the conditions brought out in all the reports under review is recognized."

An authoritative source reported that a third administrative officer at the hospital is scheduled to be replaced in addition to Drs. Jones and Jackson, but McNutt's letter made no mention of this intention. The administrator said these other changes are to be made:

1. Further personnel replacements—some hospital employes already have been discharged, an official source reported—to be "accomplished in the main in accordance with recommendations made to me by the new director in chief."

2. Creation of a new hospital position of "material officer," the post to be filled "by a colored man who has had adequate training over a number of years as a thoroughly reliable employe of the Public Health Service."

3. Selection of a "trained colored lay hospital administrator" to replace Dr. Jackson, the new official to have a "background of experience as an auditor and as a social worker."

4. Regular conferences are to be held between Public Health Service representatives and the new director-in-chief, Dr. John W. Lawler, who will continue as dean of the Howard medical school.

Only 10% of Bills Paid

Conditions at Freedmen's became a matter of concern several weeks ago for the House Appropriations Subcommittee then considering appropriations estimates for the Federal Security Agency which is responsible for direction of the hospital. Subcommittee members, remarking on the relatively small number of paying patients at Freedman's called for an investigation and then learned that the General Accounting Office already had made a seven-month survey of the institution, ending last spring, and had transmitted 32 charges to McNutt.

In reporting the appropriation bill to the House yesterday, the full Appropriations Committee recommended a reduction in "miscellaneous" expenditures for the hospital $100,000 below estimates. The committee reported that in 1941 "barely 10 per cent" of the hospital's 7537 patients in 1941 "paid all or a portion of their bills."

"To bear out the committee's contention that collections at the hospital can and should be increased, the collections for March and April, 1942, showed an increase of about 60 per cent over March and April, 1941," the committee stated while observing that the "General Accounting Office investigation came to a head during the month of February, 1942."

Whisky Shortage Found

Warren's letter to McNutt accused Dr. Jones of attempting to "bar the General Accounting Office investigators from the hospital and to prevent the use of hospital records."

The Comptroller General said his investigators found a shortage of 231½ quarts of whisky, which was under the "sole custody" of Dr. Jones; discovered that internes indulged in the practice of "fee choking" (refusing admittance to patients until money was collected) learned that members of the hospital visiting staff retained without authorization "hospital moneys" collected from patients; discovered that liquor prescriptions not only were issued in the name of nurses, but narcotics prescriptions as well; learned that agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics (on a surprise night visit to Freedmen's), found narcotics prescriptions to bear "erasures and alterations" and "evidences of tampering."

On the subject of "ambulance chasing" at Freedmen's, the investigators' report, on file with the House committee, names several Negro lawyers who were permitted "free access" to indigent patients at the hospital for the purpose of approaching them as clients in claims litigation. Several outside Negro physicians are also named as associates of the attorneys and instances are cited in which injured persons were kept waiting for treatment and then sent to the physicians' offices. The report quotes one of the attorneys as connecting Dr. Jackson with a case.

The report charges "laxness, carelessness and negligence" in the whisky widely used handling of liquors at the hospital where, it said, enough liquor was kept on hand "at all times" to last for two years. Warren's letter charged "gratuitous dispensation of whisky to nonhospitalized employes and others by administrative officials," and the report listed Mrs. D. Wilson, Dr. Jones' secretary, as "one of the most frequent recipients of gratuitous liquor."

Large amounts of whisky quarts were broken, the report stated, about the time Dr. Jones received notice that he was to attend a medical convention in New York City, and again at about the time of the annual convention of former internes at Fredmen's, while 10 quarts left the hospital's stores at about the time of "the festival occasion" of the formal opening of Freedmen's tuberculosis annex.

"Enormous quantities of liquor," said the report, were prescribed by a few nurses, including a nurse who at the time was assigned to the infants' ward.

Negroes' Vigil Protests Arrest of 'Prophet'

More than a score of Negro men, women and children, professing to be Moslems, gave up their vigil at District Jail last night in protest against the arrest of their leader, Prophet Isiah Mohammed. They had been there nearly 12 hours.

The group demanded of Superintendent A. E. Green they be arrested with their leader, who is awaiting grand jury action for alleged draft evasion on the grounds that he is a Moslem. Green called police at Fifth Precinct Station and a few minutes later a scout car arrived. Police took no action, however, because they said the group was orderly and carried no picket signs.

Raid Post Equipment Is Puzzle

How well equipped are Washington's 2770 civilian defense posts, and do all of them really exist?

Some of the officials wish they knew, and one of the last things recommended by Clement Murphy before his resignaton as chief air raid warden was a general inspection that would give some idea.

A directive for such an inspection has been given to Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, inspector general for the metropolitan area, The Post learned last night. Whether he and the 26 inspectors on his staff have begun the survey was not learned.

Supposedly, there are 370 zone posts in Washington—and the proof of their existence is definite. But whether the 2410 sector posts are even as much as a telephone is not definite. It is known scores of them are just telephones in private homes.

There is no centralized information on equipment in the posts known to be set up. Officials will admit some are over-equipped and "regular arsenals," and that some have nothing—but have not yet admitted any responsibility for this situation.

Some civilian defense committeemen have consistently refused to authorize collection of equipment funds in their neighborhoods, believing the money should come from the District or the Federal Government. Both the National and local OCD at first frowned on collections, but Col. Lemuel Bolles, District Defense Director, has recently given his approval to the idea.

"He says we can collect funds, but not with our civilian defense personnel," Harry S. Wender, chairman of the civilian defense committee for Southwest Washington, declared last night. "We have 1200 persons we can't use and I know very few we can. We can't set up an entire new organization for this. In the Southwest the citizens are not financially able to buy the equipment we need. Some of the posts have everything, even canaries. We have sector wardens, but I doubt that we have the sector posts.

William J. Mileham, new chief air raid warden, said yesterday he had not been on the job long enough to know how many posts yet lacked adequate equipment, but estimated they might run into the hundreds.

Women's A. A. A. Safety Group Opens 'Share-Your-Car' Drive

The Women's Safety Committee of the District American Automobile Association chapter yesterday began organization of a city-wide "share your car" plan among Washington's automobile drivers.

The plan, as outlined by Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman, at a meeting in the minority conference room of the Senate Office Building, calls for a tabulation of auto needs in every neighborhood throughout the city.

Mrs. Thorpe suggested that the group campaign to have women in each neighborhood—on every block if possible—volunteer to act as organizers. These women would call meetings of their immediate neighbors and confer on the uses that all of the car-owners put their machines to, with the intention of pooling and alternating in the use of the cars whereever possible.

Indorsed at the meeting by representatives of the Congress of Parent-Teachers Associations and the Federation of Womens' Clubs, the plan is also to be put into effect through women's organizations throughout the city.

Mrs. Thorpe pointed out that doubling up on cars for social and recreational purposes, as well as to take workers to their jobs, should also be planned on.

Mrs. Paul McNutt and Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Ohio Senator were among those who attended and discussed the plan. The group were luncheon guests of Senator Burton in the Senate private dining room following the meeting.

Mileham Speaks Tonight At Mid City Meeting

William Mileham, newly appointed chief air raid warden of the District, will speak at a mass defense meeting of the mid-city area tonight at 8:30 in the Immacuate Conception School, Eighth and N Streets Northwest.

The program will include music by an all-girl orchestra.

A Second and More Vital Chapter on India at War

New March of Time Concludes Broad Survey; Bette Davis Follows in Footsteps of Great; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

"TOMORROW'S HISTORY TODAY" is the way they are describing "India at War," March of Time's sequel to its recent "India in Crisis."

That springs from the fact that into New Delhi, India, on the heels of the Burma defeat, trudged a weary, but dogged, U. S. fighter, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, with a promise of retribution: "We got run out of Burma . . . The Japanese are not supermen . . . Properly equipped we can throw them out." The second installment of the two-issue documentary on India purports to show how the job is going to be done.

BETTE DAVIS

Highlights of the film are the many exclusive scenes of India's vast war potential being geared for all-out effort. With boys from Georgia and Oregon fighting beside English and Chinese lads and scanning the skies for the heartening sight of American Flying Fortresses, the success of India's war effort is very close to America today.

Millions of Moslem, Hindu and Sikh workers are lending their mechanical skill to assist in the conversion of Indian heavy industry. Scenes showing the American Flying Tigers, whose exploits to gain time and hold back the Japanese are known the world around, are among many other sequences that make this release something for Americans to see.

It will be on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning today, as a companion attraction with "Syncopation."

There probably isn't a popular entertainment unit in the United States that isn't voluntarily shouldering a heavy load of extra-curricular duties to further the country's war effort and strengthen morale. Certainly not Dick Stabile and His Orchestra, with Gracie Barrie as star vocalist. Following tonight's final performance at the Earle, the entire stage show will move up to the Hotel Annapolis to add luster and gayety to the graduating exercises of the Military Police class turned out by the Officers Training Camp, over across the river, Arlington way. After this chore Mr. and Mrs. Stabile and the band will proceed directly to New York for a resumption of their summer bookings.

Final for the Record

Henry C. Pearson, technical director, drops a line, as of June 2, to corroborate the more or less grapevine reports that the Roadside Theater will not operate this summer. "The stockholders met May 21 and voted that, because of the rationing of gas and other materials vital to the operation of a theater, Roadside would suspend operations for the year 1942. We hope of course, that we will be able to reopen next Summer, but, obviously, that will be governed by world conditions." That makes it official.

The Warner Brothers are advancing the theory that it takes more than the ability to grow old convincingly in three acts or eight reels to prove an actress great. They are demonstrating it with Bette Davis, two-time Academy Award winner. In the film version of Ellen Glasgow's Pulitzer Prize novel, "In This Our Life," opening tomorrow on the screen at the Earle, Bette does a Queen Elizabeth in reverse by playing the younger sister of Olivia de Havilland, who has spunk enough—if that is what it was—to jilt George Brent and steal the love of Dennis Morgan. Could be. Duse, Bernhardt, Mojeska and others of the feminine greats in their dotage used to play debutantes.

If Mary Harris will pardon the intrusion at her ringside table, there is a likely lad, currently filling the Victory Room with a concord of sweet sound, who soon will de doing the same thing for the screen.

Les Brown, it seems, is headed for Hollywood, under contract to RKO-Radio to appear in something called "Red Hot and Sweet," in which the stars will be Rita Hayworth and Victor Mature, the same twosome now scoring so emphatically in "My Gal Sal," the Technicolor biography of the late Paul Dresser, on the screen at Loew's Palace. The music tootled by Mr. Brown and His Orchestra seems to live up to the title of the picture in which it will be heard. June 16 is the date on his calendar ringed as the one upon which he is to report to the studio in Hollywood.

While the picture is in process of production, Mr. Brown and his boys will double into the Palladium to tickle the toes of the diner-outers and gay night-lifers. All of which is what the trade usually refers to as nice going.

Bargain Day for the Moppets

A reminder to the youngsters and their oldsters that today, in addition to being the second of the week's Parochial Days, also is the regular "Kiddies' Day," at Marshall Hall Park. On this day of the week, all prices are halved, including those customarily in force for all of the popular resort's myriad amusements. The Wilson Line's Streamliner Mount Vernon leaves the Seventh Street pier at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., returning on the last trip at 5:30. Nightly moonlight cruises, of course, at 8:30.

Nothing pleases Peter Lorre more than knocking over a hollywood convention now and again. Just now Lorre is busy demolishing a fistful of conventions at the Universal Studios. With everyone else abhorring such an assignment and doing everything in his power to avoid it, the diminutive menace has elected to portray a Jap! That would be in Frank Lloyd's production of "Invisible Agent," in which Lorre will be associated with Ilona Massey, Jon Hall, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and J. Edward Bromberg. Mr. Lorre doesn't like the Nips, either. So wait until you see what kind of a dirty so-and-so he creates for Mr. Lloyd's cameras. You will hate him, but you'll love Lorre. Off his "heavy" performances, that's knocking over a precedent, all by itself.

After serenading approximately 35 of Washington's motion picture theaters on Monday and Tuesday, to call attention to the fact that every theater in the United States is selling War Bonds and Stamps for the duration, that patriotic float, featuring the Earle Theater's Roxyettes and their drum number, left the streets last night through unavoidable force of circumstances. Pursued by that loudspeaker, blaring "Any Bonds Today," the tour itself was strenuous enough. The damp, chilly weather put the finishing touch to the admirable enterprise. Hardly a Roxyette in the lot who isn't down with a honey of a cold. And Hugh Conover, WJSV announcer, who did the ballyhooing at each theater, says his throat doesn't feel too well, either. So now you know why it didn't show up in your neighborhood—if it didn't.

HEDDA HOPPER

So, Everything Happens to Her!

Hollywood, Calif., June 3. Bette Davis is a trial to her studio. Every time she gets on location something happens — like the time in Death Valley when she sat on that cactus and injured more than her pride. At Lake Arrowhead last week, on the first two days' shooting for "Now, Voyager," she tripped on a pine root and took all the hide off her shin, blistered her mouth on a hot potato in a campfire scene, and took on such a sunburn they have put on her grease paint with a trowel! Warners are thinking of changing the title to "Now, What?"

MARTHA SCOTT

When Martha Scott got a wire from Metro to hustle back and make a test for "The Man on America's Conscience," she wired, "Sorry, but first I have a date with some Marines down in Quantico, Va."

Martha, who used to teach school, says in this emergency, why not keep manual training division of the public schools open and let the children work on useful things needed for home defense. That way, parents would know where they are, and they'd be helping.

It won't be long before Margaret Hayes, formerly engaged to Jeffrey Linn, will be flying to the altar with Leif Erickson, recently divorced by Frances Farmer.

Ho, hum, just when we were getting ready to announce that John Payne and Sheila Ryan were engaged he ups and takes Jane Russell places . . . and the night George Montgomery stopped going with Hedy Lamarr, John Howard bought her dinner at a drive-in.

Major studio wants Theodore Dreiser to do an original story on the man of the hour, Joe Stalin, and Director Wyler tells me he'd like to do as his next major assignment a picture on Russia.

There's talk here that the Russian picture, "Girl from Leningrad," will be remade with Merle Oberon. 'Twould be a great pity, for it's stark realism, and no one here would wear clothes that made her look like a polar bear.

This year you have Frank Morgan, former soldier. Next year, no doubt, it will be Morgan, former farmer. He bought a few hundred acres of cactus near Hemet.

Charlie Winninger, who had just signed in the 45-65 class, received orders to report at once. Charlie was strutting all over the place—till he discovered it was a young guy in Tarzana by the same name they were after.

Maureen O'Hara and husband, Will Price, don't know whether it can be arranged, but they're planning a trip to Ireland to meet Maureen's folks. Now Maureen has a cable from Gordon Grimes, offering her the star part in a film to be produced there. Quite a step up, because only a few short years ago she was playing bits with the Abbey players. If she goes, she'll entertain our boys stationed there.

How would you like to hear a jumble of voices in a strange language, then push your face through the shrubbery over your own back yard and yell, "hi, neighbor!"—and have Carmen Miranda come dripping out of her swimming pool and yell, "Oh, baby! this is wonderful!" Well, that neighbor was Elsie Janis.

The Mesa Rotary Club pays the expenses each weekend for the soldier with the highest record at Williams Field, Arizona, to visit Hollywood. Guy Howell, from Cherryville, N. C., was the first chosen, and was the guest of Dean Jaggers.

He was taken through studios, then to Pat O'Brien's cocktail party. Joan Bennett, Olivia De Havilland, Joan Blondell gathered about him; finished that off with a tour of night clubs. When he left for camp he said, "If the Japs get me now, it's O. K. What the heck! I've seen everything!"

Camp Boys Put On Their Show

By Ernest L. Schier

Fort Belvoir is the latest training center to come up with a candidate for honors in the field of camp shows. Entitled "Belvoircades," the new revue is a rough-and-tumble affair which, it is our sad duty to report, is a little on the disappointing side. The 40 boys who took part in the show had many obstacles to overcome, such as getting time off to rehearse, replacing those boys who were moved to different camps, plus worrying over the normal routine of Army life. Yet we find it difficult to believe that "Belvoircades" is typical of the shows that have already been presented, or have yet to come, from the ranks of the selectees.

In a series of spotty numbers, which included comic skits, dance routines and even a magician, Fort Belvoir is presenting a form of entertainment which may or may not be suited to the taste of the Army audiences. As far as civilian consumption is concerned, the show has neither the freshness nor talent that should mark such ventures, in addition to which some of the numbers are in decidedly questionable taste.

We know that all concerned worked hard and were sincere in their efforts to please, so, in order to atone for what some may call our undue severity, we would like to offer a countersuggestion. Simply this: In past years the WPA spent enormous sums of money to uncover forgotten folklore and music of almost every region in the country.

Adaptable to Stage

This material can easily be adapted to the stage and would make for fine, constructive entertainment. The characters are simple and easily portrayed, the music is tuneful and a definite part of American culture, and the productions themselves could be staged simply and effectively.

Why don't those who are interested in doing camp shows investigate this material? Such a show would find an enthusiastic response whether presentation is confined to camps alone or presented to the civilian populations to raise funds for the USO, or any other useful purpose.

"Belvoircades" was presented on Tuesday night in the new Alexandria, Va., USO Building, which is really something to see. This structure is the last word in Army morale building. It is replete with stage, modern kitchen, a smooth dance floor, built-in amplifiers for recorded music and a simply scrumptious lounge.

Which raises another question. Where is Washington's USO building?

New York, June 3.

Ambassador Henri Haye probably will protest to the State Department because when Eve Curie speaks at Manhattan Center on June 15—a speech in which she'll denounce Vichy, France—the chairman at that meeting will be Eleanor Roosevelt . . . Oona O'Neill, daughter of Eugene O'Neill, and currently the No. 1 glamour subdebutante, is inviting screen offers. A theatrical agency now represents young Oona and has arranged for a series of weight-reducing treatments to prepare her for Hollywood.

Neysa McMein, the famed artist, and Alicia Patterson, the newspaper publisher-book reviewer, are collaborating on a comic strip which soon will be ready for release . . . The President will see both Jim Farley and Gov. Lehman this week about the New York gubernatorial campaign. The newest entry in the lists is Undersecretary of War Bob Patterson . . . Wendell Willkie's reply to Milton Mayer will appear in the June 27 issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Its title is "The Case for Minorities" . . . Because Alexander Woollcott is unable to climb the hill from his lake to his house in Vermont he now uses a rickshaw for that wearying trip. Alfred Lunt, who visited there, tried to pull that rickshaw up the hill and collapsed.

Sidney Bernstein, the British ministry of information's film adviser, arrived in New York a few days ago by plane. In the Barberry Room, on the night of his arrival, Bernstein was asked about the report that Darryl Zanuck was in Moscow . . . "That couldn't be true," he answered, "because I saw Zanuck yesterday in London" . . . "On the other hand, perhaps he is in Moscow," Bernstein added, after reconsideration. "After all, yesterday I was in London, and today I'm here."

Herbert Agar, chairman of Freedom House—who was a seaman in the last war—is trying to enlist again . . . Eve Curie, who recently completed a tour of the world's battlefronts, encountered some passport difficulty because the Vichy government had deprived her of citizenship. In lieu of her passport she traveled under special credentials from Col. Bill Donovan . . . John L. Lewis' Committee of Five, about to adjourn for the summer, was held over by Lewis—to wait for any possible action this week by the C. I. O. in retaliation for Phil Murray's ouster . . . Last week Louis Nizer, who represents the creators of "Superman," discussed him with Arturo Toscanini. "Frankly," said the anti-Fascist maestro, "I'd much rather be a man than a superman."

The commander of a British warship which recently was repaired at the Brooklyn Navy Yard was asked by one of his sailors to make due representations concerning an alleged violation. After full investigation, he marked the case closed. This was what had happened: The British sailor met some American sailors, and made disparaging remarks about our Navy. Instead of resenting it, the sailors treated him to a drink, then another drink, then a third. Each time he uttered an anti-United States Navy crack he was treated to a drink. When he passed out the sailors took him to a Bowery tattoo shop. And on his chest they had tattooed a large United States battleship, under the red-white-and-blue inscription "God Bless America."

When Manuel Quezon saw "Lady in the Dark" last week the show's conductor tried to get a copy of the Philippine national anthem. Even Quezon's aide couldn't whistle or hum it. That's why, that night, Quezon heard "The Star-Spangled Banner," followed by "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" . . . Prof. Frank Monaghan of Yale, who is Grover Whalen's director of plan, scope and research for the "New York at War" parade, has only two books in his office—a telephone book and Ford Madox Ford's "No More Parades." In the latter book, under the title, Dr. Monaghan wrote: "After June 13" . . . Luise Rainer will appear on Broadway in a modernized version of Ernest Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms" . . . Mrs. Nikita Bailieff will help revive the "Chauve Souris" show in New York.

Mary Astor will return to Broadway in a play by Guy Repp . . . After Paul Muni completes his next picture he'll give up all movie and stage work for the duration of the war. He'll work only for Government broadcasts and films . . . Bob Best, the American-born newspaperman who refused to return to America, and preferred, "in behalf of history," to broadcast for the Nazis, is married to a Viennese countess 20 years his senior. The reporters who knew him describe him as "a small-time newspaperman who grew roots in the gutters of Vienna" . . . Ernest Hemingway has discovered that a pirated edition of "For Whom the Bell Tolls" is being sold in Argentina.

Hollywood Conserves Rubber At Horse-and-Buggy Premiere

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, June 3.

Hollywood came around to it last week when it hitched ol' Dobbin to the Shay and drove to its first Horse-and-Buggy Premiere.

Not since premieres began in movietown has the like been seen.

While the crowd roared and the lights lanced the night, up to the richly ornate front of the Hawaii Theater, on Holywood Boulevard in the very heart of town, drove the stars arriving in the completest line of landaus, victorias, hansoms, tallyhoes, surreys and gigs to be found anywhere in America outside of Henry Ford's Dearborn Museum of Americana.

Fittingly, the motion picture thus signally distinguished was R. K. O.-Radio's new Lum and Abner laughmaker, "The Bashful Bachelor." Fittingly, because it is laid in that horse-and-buggy land of Pine Ridge created by the top Crosleys of the air lanes and now being brought by them to the screen.

Yet they do say it wasn't the picture which suggested the character taken by the premiere, but rather the rubber shortage.

For the movies are taking the rubber shortage big. Already they have pooled and named a coordinator of transportation. It's a town and a countryside out here of limitless distances, where everything has to roll on wheels. So wheels and the stuff that goes round them must be conserved. The movies are doing it.

No More Lost Motion

No longer may studio trucks blithely dash hiter and yon, taking an extra or a can of grease paint to some distant location, then speeding back empty to the studio. They have to wait around the studio until they can go out full, then wait around the location until they can return the same way. Stars and directors ride with extras and grips until the springs groan.

It's revolutionary.

What happened when "The Bashful Bachelor" came up for consideration as the first premiere under the new dispensation, was revolutionary, too.

Customary procedure would have been for the stars and invited notables to get dressed up in ties and tails, sequins and ermine, then wait around home for the studio cars to pick 'em up. It's always happened that way before at big premieres.

But the coordinator thought of all those studio cars, big as yatchs, each rolling on irreplaceable rubber, dashing around town to pick up this star or that, this correspondent or that, and deliver 'em singly or in pairs at the doors of the Hawaii.

The coordinator shuddered and yelled No.

In fact, even if customary procedure were amended so that the stars and guests could be picked up in wholesale lots, instead of retail, thus reducing trips and mileage, the coordinator still couldn't see it.

So that was out. Then RKO-Radio's bright young men of the premiere committee on arrangements said all right, they'd settle for horses and buggies. Even that gave the corordinator brief pause, inasmuch as buggies sometimes have rubber tires. But it's a kind of rubber no longer otherwise useful, so he gave in.

Thereupon the committee on arrangements did themselves proud. They thumbed the books on horse and buggy procedure, learned about all the trimmings, put 'em in.

Horse blocks were installed before the Hawaii, to which milady could step on alighting from the buggy.

A section of the three-acre paved parking yard behind the theater was set aside for horses and buggies, with horse troughs, feed bags, and hostlers in charge.

They even put a street sweeper out front, finding for the occasion an aging veteran of the Gay 90's who used to ply his art (and brush) before Los Angeles theaters in the days when the horse was king.

Luckily, Hollywood alone among American cities, perhaps, has this complete line of horse-drawn vehicles. Everything from gig to stagecoach. The Pat Jones Stable owns them, keeps them in good working order, rents them out to the movies as required for picture work.

This time they were pressed into service as originally intended.

By Rank and Station

Lum and Abner, actually Chester Lauck and Norris Goff, a couple of young fellows who usually hide behind false faces which make 'em look twice their age, arrived with their wives in a two-seater surrey.

Lovely Louise Currie, who plays the squire's daughter in "The Bashful Bachelor," came in a hansom cab.

Andy Devine and Stu Erwin, like the stars, brought their wives in a two-seater surrey. It listed heavily on Andy's side.

James Craig, Marjorie Wadsworth and Jane Russell came in a landau.

Edgar Bergen escorted Ginny Simms in a victoria. That little woodenhead, Charley McCarthy, however, refused to accompany them. Said, it was reported, he didn't like victorias. Too much wood.

Whether it was a tallyho or a kind of reformed hotel bus which brought some of the press corps, nobody could rightly determine.

KATHARINE BOOTH

featured in Paramount's "Holiday Inn," the musico-dance extravaganza, costarring Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire, demurely tries to hide in the center of this cobwebby group of coryphees, engaged in the same merry enterprise. Known only as "The Sextette," these diaphonous young women are expected to supplant the Floradora Sextette, the Navy Blues Sextette, the Dionne Quintuplets and other famous feminine groups, in the public mind—the press agent hopes!

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Perseverance Does It Again!

Hollywood, June 3 (INS).—Amusing how clearly word that Ernst Lubitsch will direct Irene Dunne in "Lady in Ermine" recalls a conversation Ernst and Irene had fully five years ago. We were all at the Mervyn LeRoys at dinner and Ernst, the cigar-smoking puck, who has never directed Irene, almost bowled her over when he said: "I must make a picture with you. You would be perfect for one of my divorce comedies." Since Irene is one of the few movie stars who has never been divorced and is one of our happiest married actresses, she didn't exactly know how to take that compliment!

IRENE DUNNE

Well, it has taken all this time for Ernst to get Irene for a picture, which he will direct after he finishes his first Twentieth Century-Fox opus. He will start "Lady in Ermine" as soon as the necessary formalities are arranged with Warners, who own the rights. It's not a musical, but a drama in which Irene will sing one song.

Ginger Rogers is so crazy about Billy Wilder (as a director, of course) that I bet she'll want "Women's Wear," his next production. It's about a traveling saleswoman. "Women's Wear" unites Wilder with his old writing pal, Charlie Brackett. These two collaborated on adapting "Hold Back the Dawn" scripting their original; "Ball of Fire," and several other hits before Billy stepped out as a director on "The Major and the Minor," with Ginger. He will produce and direct "Women's Wear" and Brackett will do the script and as well coproduce.

Reckon Hal Roach wasn't kidding when he told me he expected to line up America's 12 most beautiful girls for "Prairie Chicken," Jimmie Rogers' comedy. Hal is off to a flying start, for he is bringing Rosemary La Planche—Miss America of 1941—to Hollywood as the first of his half-dozen lovelies. Rosemary not only won honors at Atlantic City at its yearly beauty parade, but she is winner of many other similar contests. Her photographs and newsreel pictures show her to be a most photogenic young woman.

Talk about a busman's holiday. I saw "Tortilla Flat" at the Fox Theater in San Francisco, and loved it. Hedy Lamarr is the surprise of the year and no one can say from now on that she is a clotheshorse and her only appeal is beauty. She wears the cheapest wardrobe and she troupes with Spencer Tracy and John Garfield and gives them a race for honors. I also saw Lieut. Jimmy Stewart in his Warners short, "Winning Your Wings," and it did my heart good the way the audience burst into applause when he said: "Here I am, Jimmy Stewart, back in the movies."

63% White, 88% of Negro School Pupils Have Physical Defects, D. C. Survey Shows

Sixty-three per cent of the District's white school children, and 88 per cent of its Negro students, were found to be suffering from one or more physical defects, according to a report by the school medical inspection service of the D. C. Health Department to the Board of Education yesterday.

It also was reported that seven and a half years of educational opportunity were lost when 1398 children were quarantined for measles during the 1941-42 session.

"Hygienic conditions were, on the whole, good," the report said after examining students at 202 schools. "Two senior high school swimming pools, however, are potential health hazards because of frequent excessive bacterial contamination. They are urgently in need of mechanical equipment for filtering and chlorinating water."

Although the measles epidemic during the year made a tremendous increase over the 1940-41 figres of 14 cases, most other diseases appeared with far less frequency among school children. Cases of chickenpox decreased 33 per cent, and the number of scarlet fever sufferers went from 502 the previous year to 50. Diphtheria patients, too, were on the decline, going from 43 to 19. Whooping cough, increased 19 per cent.

Complete examinations were given to 38,781 children, the report said, and 90,638 were given partial examinations. Doctors and nurses made 10,434 visits to schools, both white and Negro.

Formation of Victory Clubs in public schools to study the lives of military and civilian heroes who have performed outstanding services to the country will be a part of the program next year, in cases where the principals and teachers wish to establish such organizations, it was announced by the Board of Education.

LONG RANGERS move in line out into the African desert to begin a reconnaissance patrol

DETECTIVE STORIES occupy the rangers (right) at siesta time in the desert. Man in the foreground is a sub-lieutenant, son of a famed general, who is gunner and navigator of the unit

(Editors note: The British have said they were forewarned and ready when the Axis struck last week in Libya. How they knew, of course, they cannot tell. But they let Associated Press Correspondent William McGaffin watch their patrols work far behind the enemy lines and his report may be a clue. McGaffin since has proceeded to India.)

By William McGaffin

With British Forces in Libya (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—One of the most daring information services ever attempted is operated by a band of audacious British volunteers who slip through the enemy's back door in ordinary American trucks to find out what he is doing.

Like the scorpion, which is their emblem, they carry a dangerous sting for their enemy. Sometimes they shoot up an enemy post before they return, or bring back some of the enemy with them.

They have no secret weapons, no disguises. They wear regular uniforms and ride in trucks—not even armor-plated—such as you might pass on any American highway.

Their weapons are speed, surprise, camouflage and firing power.

They were organized in July, 1940, after Italy's entrance into the war made it imperative to know what was going on in Libya.

Very little is known about them, but Associated Press Photographer Weston Haynes and I have been allowed to visit their advance headquarters.

What we found was a bunch of bronzed young Spartans from all over the British Empire, men picked for their mental and physical sharpness, who were in love with danger, in love with their jobs and in love with the desert.

They consider it a "poor show" to talk much about their work, which they call "stunts," but this is one hair-raiser I was told about:

A long-range patrol of 20 men came in by the usual desert back door to try to shoot up an Axis encampment and bag some prisoners. They drove boldly down the main Axis highway in Libya and found, when they arrived, that they were 20 against 800.

The headlights of an Axis motor convoy which just had arrived brightly lighted the camp's central square. Germans and Italians sat around, smoking and eating.

For four minutes, the two groups stared at each other, the enemy men showing only mild curiosity. Then one of the Britons was overheard speaking in English and the first shot rang out.

A roaring gunfight lasted 25 minutes, sometimes with the men blazing away no further from each other than 20 yards. Then the British pulled out. They had captured two prisoners, killed many of the enemy and destroyed some trucks. The patrol suffered no losses, not even a wounded man.

"It was not so difficult as you might think," said the leader, who was given the Military Cross for the exploit. "Jerry didn't expect us there."

Another of their tasks is to taxi special troops for sabotage jobs.

By day, the men hide carefully from enemy planes. But at night they travel with bright lights, for speed and safety. Even if enemy planes spotted them, they explain, they could not distinguish between friend and foe. And enemy ground forces would have to turn on their lights, too, giving the patrol ample warning.

POVICH

As a matter of pride, it is surprising that the Chicago Cubs have claimed Jimmy Foxx, who has arrived at the end of his tether in the American League. The National League has long been accused of being a minor league, content to accept American League castoffs the while yelling that it rates as a big league.

Foxx is the latest of a long line of American League discards to find a haven in the National League. Babe Ruth, Al Simmons, Dixie and Gerald Walker, Leo Durocher, Earl Averill and Bill Werber are a few of the American Leaguers who prolonged their baseball careers by getting jobs in the National League, which has become known as cheaper company.

The flow has been mainly one way—from the American League to the National. The transit in the other direction has been rare and the conclusion is obvious enough: the National is not as fast a league. The National League people are considerably irked by the suggestion, but it is borne out by American League successes in the World Series and all-star games against National League competition.

Here's a gratuitous suggestion for President Ford Frick of the National League: Don't permit National League clubs to sign up washed-up American Leaguers. It is an admission that the National League is cheaper company.

The rebuttal of National Leaguers always has been, of course, that their World Series and all-star game defeats have been mainly at the hands of the Yankees—a super-club in the American League. But that alibi doesn't stand up. The cold fact is that the Yankees, in their World Series triumphs, have a higher percentage of winning ball against National League pennant winners than they have in their own league, which contains at least four second-division clubs.

No matter how he fares in the National League, Jimmy Foxx will go down as one of the great ball players of his time—a boy prodigy who was a star among men. His career will live as a tribute to the baseball acumen of Frank (Home Run) Baker, who first scented the amazing ability of the 16-year-old boy who was his southern Maryland neighbor.

Connie Mack was overwhelmed by Baker's praise of the apple-cheeked farm boy and gave him a trial. Baker told Mack that the boy was ready for the big leagues either as a pitcher, first baseman, a catcher, an outfielder, or a third baseman—that Mack could have the choice of his talents. Mack let him play 10 games, mostly as a pinch hitter, in 1925, and became very much interested when Foxx batted .667.

It was only by accident that newspapermen learned about the double x on Foxx's name. He was appearing in the box scores simply as "Fox" until they saw the typing of "Foxx" on Jimmy's suitcase. Jimmy couldn't explain the additional x, except to say that "my grandpappy spelled it that way, so I guess it belongs there." Whereupon he went in for a big plug of chewing tobacco just to prove his maturity.

He could have been one of baseball's greatest third basemen, or one of its finest catchers, or he could have been a great pitcher, baseball men believe. He did rank with Lou Gehrig as the best first baseman of his time. And the consensus is that he could hit a ball farther than anybody except Babe Ruth. In fact, Foxx is the only man in history to hit a ball over the roof of Comiskey Park, and he accomplished that feat twice.

His greatest compliment, though, came to Foxx in the early series of all-star games when he was voted on the team not as a first baseman, the job at which he was best, but as a third baseman. Without specializing at third base, he was the most valuable third baseman in the league on account of the hitting he brought to the position.

There are dozens of Jimmy Doolittle stories since General Jimmy led the bombing attack on Tokyo, but the one we like best is the story of Doolittle's little adventure after the World War, when he was still a mere lieutenant in the Army air forces.

Doolittle, as one of the Army's crack fliers, was transporting a general to a far-Western post when a storm began to raise hob with his little open-cockpit two-seater plane. The general, slightly apprehensive about the tossing around he was getting (it was before the days of instrument flying), summoned all his courage and sat tight, puting his full faith in Doolittle's flying ability.

Despite the storm, they made it, and Doolittle set the plane down with the skill of a master, then helped the general out. "I want to congratulate you, lieutenant," said his superior. "I know we had a rough trip, but every time I got scared I took a look at you up in front with those earphones on and I knew you'd keep on the beam and bring us through."

"Yes, sir, General," said Doolittle, "except that there wasn't any beam. Those earphones were a great help though. I was listening to the World Series!"

CONSIDINE

New York, June 3.—It looks like a field of five for the running of the $60,000 Belmont Stakes Saturday. There will be Alsab, Shut Out, Lochinvar, Half Crown and King's Abbey and the prospect is that Belmont will set another record by having its second successive two million dollar saturday.

Shut Out, winner of the Kentucky Derby and recent conqueror of Challedon in stirring time, worked a mile and a quarter in 2:02 the other day. That's faster than his winning time in the Derby. But Alsab will go to the post the favorite. Maybe odds-on. We don't know of any colt in recent years who so thoroughly captured the head and heart of the racing fan. And this will certainly be no time to get off him, after the way he won the Preakness and Withers and the way he has worked. Though under a mild hand ride for the last quarter, he worked a mile and a quarter Monday in 2:03 1/5.

Just as the first of the Army-Navy relief baseball games, the one between the Dodgers and Giants, was the greatest, so may Saturday's racing card at Belmont turn out to be the best of racing wartime contributions. All the profits will be turned over that day to the two great service charities. Probably more than a quarter of a million dollars will be realized, for things are on a titanic scale at Belmont.

We suppose the reason why the Red Sox were able to get waivers on Jimmy Foxx is that his salary, around $20,000, is too much for the payrolls of the Athletics and Senators and other clubs who could have picked him up for $7500. Ironically he wound up with the Cubs, to sort of take the place of Babe Dahlgren, whose place he took some years ago when Boston bought him.

As for the good he'll do the Cubs, everything depends on his sinuses. He has perhaps the worst sinus trouble in baseball, even including Paul Derringer. Jimmy told us once that when they're acting up, any sudden jar can create a complete blackout. Things have gone black for him at the moment when his left foot hits the dirt, after taking his stride at bat, and he has sweated through the split-second of darkness . . . wondering if the invisible ball was coming at his skull. Sudden dives for hot grounders around first base have also doused the lights in his eyes.

He goes to the National League as the greatest right-handed slugger ever developed by the American League. His home run total of 524 is second only to Ruth's incomparable 714. His title of leading the American League for seven years in strikeouts seems also imperishable.

Pvt. Jerry Lewis, the sportswriter, was in a New York restaurant the other night, on leave from Fort Knox.

"Hello, Jerry," Jimmy Walker called from a neighboring table. "How are you getting along?"

"Well, I don't know," Pvt. Lewis said. "But at a comparable stage in our careers, I've had five more newspaper mentions than Sergeant York."

"Congratulations," Alfred wired. "See you finally made the front page."

George Raft, one of the many Yankee batboys who made good, is doing a fine job with his boxing shows. Footing all the bills, and with a minimum of bow-taking, Raft has provided a dozen shows at as many camps on the West Coast.

He hires the best talent available and dresses up the show by bringing along such fighters as Jimmy McLarnin, Jim Jeffries, Fidel LaBarba, Ceferino Garcia, Frank Moran and others now living on the coast. They give demonstrations and recount their old battles. Sometimes the camps provide a couple of the fights. Raft referees quite a few of the battles. He used to box. In fact that's what he wanted to be. The late Eddie Mead was his manager.

White Sox Sign Pitcher Jake Wade

New York, June 3 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox today signed Southpaw Jake Wade, former major leaguer, to bolster their pitching staff which had been depleted by a spring injury to Thornton Lee and the recent Navy enlistment of Johnny Rigney.

A native of Morehead City, N. C., Wade was given his unconditional release by Indianapolis of the American Association last year. In his big league stay, from 1936 through 1939, he twirled for Detroit, Boston and St. Louis in the American League.

Explosive Early Innings Supply Argument and 8 Runs for St. Louis

Browns Tally 8 Runs In 2d, Beat Nats, 9-5

Hudson, Wilson Shelled; Griffs Drop to Cellar After Night Game

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The Browns spent 30 minutes at bat in the second inning at Griffith Stadium last night, banging in runs as if they had an "X" card and caved-in the Nats' one-game winning streak. It was a long time between outs for Sid Hudson as the Browns went into mass production and posted a big "8" on the score board as their efforts for the inning.

The Nats spent the rest of the night trying to catch the Browns but succeeded only in adding a touch of respectability to the final score, 9-5.

The warmish night lured 7000 customers to the lighted stadium and at one point in the Browns' big second inning it seemed that the Browns were out to score one run for each fan in the park.

They unloaded eight hits against Hudson and his successor, Jack Wilson, in that second inning, to wipe out Washington's skimpy 1-to-0 lead of the moment. They blasted the Nats into the cellar.

Bob Repass was no help to the Nats. The rookie shortstop messed up a double-play grounder that would have averted the eight-run explosion of the Browns, and the boos were dinned into his ears for the rest of the evening.

Masterson Stars in Relief

Bob Muncrief couldn't last the game out for the Browns despite the lopsided lead he was given. He was in continual trouble with passes and escaped serious damage in the sixth inning only because of the over-ambitious base running of Jake Early. With his team six runs behind and nobody out in the sixth, Early conceived the not-quite-bright idea of trying to stretch a single into a double and was thrown out. That bit of thinking blighted the inning for the Nats who banged out four hits in the session but got only one run.

Walter Masterson attempted to keep the Nats in the ball game with a clever stretch of five scoreless relief innings, and he contributed two hits to the Nats attack, but Washington could get no more than one run in any inning.

All of these things happened in that second inning:

Melton Hurls, Bats Phillies To 2-1 Victory

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 3.—Frank Melton won his own ball game for the Phils tonight by pitching six-hit ball and then driving in the winning run with a double in the tenth inning against Paul Derringer and the Cincinnati Reds. The score was 2 to 1.

Philadelphia's victory gave it a sweep of a two-game series.

The Phils shut out the Reds yesterday in 10 innings. Cincinnati thus was allowed 1 run in 20 innings against the perennial eighth-place team.

A blowup of the Cincinnati defense handed the Phils their first run in the fourth. With one out, Dan Murtaugh doubled. He was promptly trapped off second, but Eddie Joost threw wild and he went to third.

Nick Etten fanned, Ray Lamanno muffed Danny Litwhiler's high foul, and Danny then reached first and Murtaugh scored when Bert Haas fumbled the throw to first on a grounder.

A walk, a wild pitch and Joost's double tied it up in the fifth, but after Derringer got two men out in the tenth, Tom Livingston singled and Melton doubled over Max Marshall's head for the ball game.

Sundra on Mound In Ladies' Day Special Today

Today's finale of the Nats' series with the Browns has been designated as a special ladies day game by Griffith Stadium officials.

Steve Sundra will be Manager Bucky Harris' pitching choice. He has lost two of his three starts this season. Manager Luke Sewell will send right-handed rookie Loy Hanning to the mound.

Owners Clark Griffith and Donald Barnes occupied the same box at last nights' game and supposedly talked trade but no announcement was forthcoming. The Nats are known to be bidding for Third Baseman Harland Clift with Buck Newsom and Bruce Campbell reported available to the Browns in any deal.

Bright Willie Easy Winner At Delaware

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 3.—Mrs. Ralph McIlvain's Bright Willie, one of the ranking 3-year-olds of the current season, raced to an impressive victory here today in the featured 6-furlong Stanton Handicap.

Only recently arrived at this course from New York to be pointed for the rich Kent Stakes, Bright Willie ser his stock soaring for that event by the easy manner in which he turned back a quintet of first-flight opponents.

Rated along in fourth place by Porter Roberts until well around the turn, Bright Willie found his racing legs just before swinging into the stretch and once he got to the pacemaking Joe Ray it was just a matter of how far he would outdistance his field.

With Roberts holding a snug rein, Bright Willie flashed past the judges five lengths to the fore of Joe Ray. The latter was stopping badly but stuck it out to beat Warlock for the place.

Bright Willie's score was immensely popular with the crowd of 6500 which sent him postward odds-on. The handsome son of Brilliant and Sweep Face paid $3.40 straight and stepped the three-quarters over a rough track in 1:13.

Larkin Licks Rodak

Newark, N. J., June 3 (U.P.).—Tippy Larkin, 137½, Garfield, N. J., scored a 10-round decision over Leo Rodak, 136, Chicago, at the Meadowbrook Bowl here tonight. Rodak opened a cut under Larkin's chin with a right uppercut in the third round but from then on Larkin had the better of the going. Larkin staggered Rodak in the sixth with hard rights to the chin.

Braves Lick Cards On Sain's Relief Job

11,477 See Twilight Army-Navy Game; 2 St. Louis Rallies Halted; Score Is 4-3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 3.—Behind the masterful relief pitching of Johnny Sain, who stopped three Cardinal rallies, the Boston Braves scored three runs in the first inning and added one in the fifth to defeat the Redbirds, 4 to 3, in an Army-Navy Relief twilight game before a crowd of 11,477 here today.

Twice the Cardinals had the bases loaded with just one out, in the sixth and ninth innings, but each time the Braves erased the threat with sizzling double plays.

Sain got a bit erratic and filled bags without a hit in the ninth, but then forced Enos Slaugher to line to Max West who stepped on first base for a double play, unassisted, to end the game.

Getting the contests under way, after a military exhibition, Boston knocked Murry Dickson out of the box in short order. Tommy Holmes tripled to left and scored on Frank Demaree's grounder to short. A single and two walks filled the bases as Harry Gumbert was called in to relieve. West greeted him with a single to center, scoring Eddie Miller and Paul Waner.

Jimmy Brown tripled to left with only one down in the seventh but died there.

The Braves also filled the bases with one away in the ninth but Gumbert forced Miller and John Cooney to pop out.

Lou Tost, who started on the hill for Boston, was relieved by Sain in the sixth after yielding five of the Cards nine hits but got credit for the victory.

The most spectacular catch of the game was Sebastian Sisti's sommersaulting stop of Slaughter's short fly to center in the first inning.

DiMaggio's Homer Brings 4-1 Victory

Chicagoans Win 'Moral Victory' By Making Most Hits Off Bonham

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Ernie (Tiny) Bonham, leading candidate for pitcher-of-the-year honors, stretched his winning streak to eight games today as the world champion Yankees coasted to a 4-to-1 triumph over the Chicago White Sox, in the opening engagement of a home stand against the Western clubs of the American League.

For the Sox it was almost a moral victory, because they made more hits off the big right-hander than any other club this season, maneuvered a couple of bases on balls and escaped a shutout by George Kuhel's sixth inning homer into the right-field stands.

Previously Bonham had pitched four shutouts in seven starts, had allowed only five bases on balls, and had given no more than seven hits in one game. Today Chicago made eight.

The Yankees waded in to Bill Dietrich, the bespectacled right-hander, for a run in the first inning on successive singles by Frank Crosetti and Buddy Hassett and a force play by Tom Henrich.

Then in the third Joe DiMaggio, who also had singled in the first, lined his tenth home run of the season into the lower left field stands scoring two runners ahead of him—Hassett, who had singled, and Henrich, who had walked.

It was New York's twenty-second victory in 26 games and seventh straight over Chicago. More statistics—the Yankees completed their sixtieth double play, Joe Gordon extended his hitting streak to 19 games and Hassett ran his to 14, getting three hits.

Burnett Plays Minus Caddy and Scores One Over Par; 17 Pars for Pittman

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Volney Burnett, the Maryland State Amateur champion, shamed the golfers who insist "I can't play without a caddy" when he packed his own bag yesterday at Manor Club and tied Gene Pittman for the medal with one over par rounds of 71 in the thirty-eighth renewal of the Middle Atlantic Amateur Golf championship.

Burnett, one of the last players off the tee was in a threesome and after his partners shared a double caddy Volney was left without one. He went into the clubhouse, borrowed a light canvas bag and with the added handicap played a fine round of golf.

Pittman simply matched the card for 17 of the 18 holes for his medal tying 71. Congressional's chip and putt expert was hitting the greens in regulation figures yesterday and as regular as clockwork he knocked off 16 consecutive pars. A tee shot just short of the seventeenth green cost him his only bogey of the day and on the eighteenth he canned a four-footer for his 71 and the first of the one over par rounds reported.

Birdied 7th Hole

Burnett, Indian Spring's club champion, had gone over par on the first hole, birdied the seventh and put together seven pars for an out nine of 35. Straying iron shots cost the golfing fireman over par efforts on the tenth and eleventh holes and when he was still two over par on the fifteenth tee it looked as though his medal chances were lost.

But he learned of Pittman's score at this point and reached the long fifteenth in two fine wood shots and two-putted for a birdie. He birdied the sixteenth by dropping a ten-foot putt and then had things his way but a long hook off the seventeenth tee cost him a bogey four. Volney drew a laugh from the gallery as he came up the eighteenth with his sack on his back but he knocked a second shot within 15 feet of the cup and barely missed a birdie putt for the medal.

Claude Rippy, one of the post entries which made the starting field one of the best in years, played with Roger Peacock and the star shotmakers from Indian Spring had respective totals of 72 and 73. "We both hit some good shots and a few bad ones and both made one good sized putt," they chorused, plenty satisfied with their efforts after not too much golf of late.

Ties with Peacock

Bill Wenzel, one of Kenwood's half dozen vastly improved weekend golfers and par shooting threats, tied Peacock with a 73 for the third best score of the day. Wenzel had a pair of deuces on the toughest par threes on the front nine, the third and fifth, both from comparatively short putts.

The 74 bracket was a popular one. Harry G. Pitt, champion in 1928 when he was in his streak of major tournament victories which extended over several years, played his home course in 38 and 36. M. Parker Nolan, Congressional's big hitter and D. C. amateur finalist last year, paired 37s as did Luther C. Steward, Jr., Columbia. Buddy Sharkey, the Georgetown golf team captain had 36 and 38 while Eddie Johnston, the Loyola of Baltimore links captain, reversed those totals.

Scoring was higher than expected despite the perfect conditions and two of the three 77s made the championship flight. Spencer S. Overton, the 1940 titlist surprised by taking 77 strokes but he made up for it with a par on the first hole of the playoff which won a place while Joe Wilson, Kenwood, had a five on the second which bettered the six of Martin F. McCarthy, Columbia, who was in plenty of trouble on both holes.

Several others who figured to make the grade in the first bracket were consigned to higher flights today. Charley Malone eased around the woods nine in 36 but putted himself to a 42 coming back. Billy Houghton had 82, Earle Skinker 82 and Second Lieut. Jack Keele had 84.

The first round attraction today pits Burnett against Overton in a renewal of the Maryland State Amateur championship finals over the same course in 1937 when Burnett won, 2 and 1. Pitt vs. Nolan is another initial round attraction.

Play in the second annual Middle Atlantic Senior championship advanced to the second round with Frank G. Butler, Jack McCarron, Walter R. Tuckerman and W. J. Peters surviving, all winning by three or four up margins. Butler was one down at the turn to Bert Gamble but won five of six holes on the back nine.

N. L. Attendance 100,000 Below 1941, Frick Says

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 3.—Ford Frick, president of the National League, disclosed tonight the league was running approximately 100,000 below last year's attendance figures.

He said the schedule "undoubtedly would be revised" for at least some and perhaps all of the remaining relief-fund National League games in order to start them at hours "more conductive to drawing larger crowds."

Frick was here for the twilight Army-Navy Relief game between the Cardinals and Boston Braves.

Fairfax Nine Tops N. T. S. By 15-9 Score

A highly successful diamond season was concluded at Fairfax High yesterday when the hosts put on a 26-hit spree to down National Training School, 15-9, for their tenth triumph in 14 games. The winners brought their run total to 146 for the year.

Despite numerous switches in the lineup, Fairfax was never headed after pushing home two runs in the second inning. The effort was capped by an 8-run uprising in the sixth. N. T. S. countered with a 7-run sixth inning, but was falling back at the end.

James Eyed Alsab and Started Comeback

Premier Rider of '36 Now Back on Top; Pilots Market Wise

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Things were happening pretty fast there in the middle of the $50,000 Widener Handicap at Hialeah last winter, and Jockey Basil James was doing the best he could aboard Gramps.

Suddenly, out of the corner of his eye, he spotted a brown colt flying past him like the Lexington Avenue express passing Twenty-eighth Street station at 1:30 a. m.

Basil arrived at the finish line late that day. (Gramps finished tenth). The first thing he did on arrival was to call his agent aside and say: "Look, Bones, a boss sailed by me around the three-quarter pole. He got shut off, then he came again. I don't know his name, but Bobby Vedder was riding him, and I understand he's eligible for the Derby. See if you can get me the mount, and I'll win the Derby."

Alsab Top Reason

The agent told Al Sabath, the Chicago lawyer, just this, and that's how Basil and Alsab, who finally finished fourth in the Widener, got together. It's also one of the two big reasons why the "firecracker" out of Sunnyside, Wash., has bounced back from the disgusted kid who went home last fall because he couldn't get a winner, to a spot where he might even reach his heights of 1936, when he led all the Nation's jockeys.

Alsab is the more important reason just now because, having piloted Al Sabath's flier to second place in the Derby and to victory in the Preakness and Withers, Basil is odds-on to boot the Chicago champ home in the mile and a half Belmont Stakes Saturday. The other reason is Market Wise, Lou Tufano's rags to riches express who whipped the mighty Whirlaway in the Suburban last Saturday, with James doing one of the season's best steering jobs.

Through a sports-writing friend,

BASIL JAMES

James first got the mount on Market Wise in the Jockey Club Gold Cup last fall. And the first crack out of the box, he pulled a rabbit out of the hat by upsetting Whirlaway then.

Grandfather Helps

With two mounts like Alsab and Market Wise, 24-year-old James is the first to admit he has "a lot going for me."

A native of Sterling, Colo., James was a kid working at picking apples around Sunnyside in 1935 when his grandfather, looking through the race results one afternoon, got the happy inspiration to make a jocket out of him.

He came to New York in 1938, was signed as Sonny Whitney's contract rider, and everything was beer and skittles until he tangled with a slump last fall. It got so bad, that he packed up, broke with Whitney, and went out for a vacation on the 50-acre farm he bought his grandfather at Sunnyside. He came back at Hialeah as a free-lance rider.

His pals call him Elmer, after a cartoon character a little on the dim side. This was started by his agent, Bones Laboyne, one day after he had given a horse a bad ride.

The tag stuck.

Tebbetts Blocked From Commission By Air Corps Rule

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 3.—Catcher George (Birdie) Tebbetts of the Detroit Tigers won't be able to get the Army Air Corps commission he has applied for, a military spokesman said today, but he's welcome to try for another assignment.

Maj. Frank Denny of the Army Procurement Division said regulations forbid acceptance of men under 30 for a ground crew commission, sought by Tebbetts who is 27. The officer added that the corps undoubtedly would take his application for training as a student pilot.

Tebbetts, unmarried but holding 3-A draft classification because of his mother's dependency, applied for the commission Monday before the Tigers left on an American League Eastern trip.

Ticket Sales For Griffith Luncheon Rise

The testimonial luncheon for Washington Club President Clark C. Griffith became an unqualified success yesterday during a meeting in the offices of Hon. Edward M. Curran, general chairman of the Washington, D. C., Citizens Committee and United States District Attorney, at the District Court Building.

The luncheon scheduled for the Mayflower Hotel next Wednesday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock was provided with a decided boast when Ticket Chairman J. Leighton (Count) Cornwell announced that 20 tables seating 10 persons each had been claimed while the meeting was in progress.

Curran later predicted that some 800 Washingtonians will turn out to pay tribute to Griffith, and also set tomorrow and Monday afternoons at 3 o'clock as dates for future meetings of the special committee he will name for the Griffith Testimonial late today and announce tomorrow morning.

Herbert Guggenheim, secretary of the Citizens Committee, alone assumed the responsibility for 10 tables yesterday. The tables were reserved by the following: Sidney B. Lust, Rudolph Berger, C. F. O'Connell, L. Gordon Leech, Hon. Edward M. Curran, Herbert Guggenheim, Washington Baseball Club, Milton Kronheim, Edward B. Eynon, Calvin Griffith, Everett Eynon, Maj. Edward Kelley, Joseph E. Jones, Martin Wiegand, John Morrissey, Ted Welliver, Lawrence Heller, Bill Dolph and Briggs Sausage Co.

Tickets for the Griffith luncheon are priced at $2.50 each and are on sale at Navy Relief Headquarters, 1721 I Street Northwest. Reservation may be made through EXecutive 0040 between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Central Defeats Wilson in First Play-off Game, 4-3

Bob Fielding, Denikos Star For Winners

Triple and Single Prove Decisive; Play Again Friday At Wilson Field

By Bill Burnett

Robbed by the glaring sun of a victory in regulation time, Central High nine yesterday was pushed to 12 innings before stopping Woodrow Wilson, 4 to 3, in the first playoff game for the 1942 public school baseball crown.

It was Mike Denikos and Bob Fielding, Viking infielders, who combined, won probably the best-played game of the season at Central stadium.

The first, coming to bat with one out in the bottom half of the twelfth, cracked a triple against the right field wall. And Fielding, who hadn't hit in five previous attempts, delivered the most important blow of the day, a single to center.

Thus the Vikings, who started the three-game playoff on the short end of the odds, earned at least an even rating for the second game Friday at Wilson's park.

Breaks Influential

The breaks played a big part in yesterday's head-and-head struggle. Wilson got a big one in the ninth when a ball lost in the sun allowed them to knot the count with 2 out, but the winners owed their lead at that point to an equally large one. That came when the same Denikos dropped a perfect single in front of Outfielder Larry Farnham in the fifth and the ball bounced freakishly over his head. It went for a homer.

Both starting pitchers were in there at the end. Besides getting the decision, the Vikings' veteran Aaron Weisenberg had an edge in most departments. He handed out 8 hits to Jack Ogle's 10 and fanned 12 while his rookie rival whiffed only 6. Ogle, however, walked 3 men to Weisenberg's 4, and each hit one batter.

That Wilson ninth was one for the book. Fielding started it by trying to field Hardison's grounder with his shin, drawing the only error charged to the winners. Ogle went down swinging, one of the four times he did that, but Jawish then walked to put men on first and second. Vinson's fly to left accounted for the second out, and it appeared Central was "in" when Sullivan lofted another pop to the same spot.

A "Sure" Out

Players even started walking off the field as Harry Wolfe loped under the ball. Suddenly he stopped, however, and the ball dropped untouched 3 feet from him. Meanwhile Hardison had scored the tying run.

Weisenberg at that point spiked further Tiger scoring ideas by fanning Monk Barbee.

Central notched its first run in the second frame with the aid of its one hit batsman and Wilson's only misplay—by Vinson. With two on, consecutive singles by Hoffman and Carrier pushed Bob Hill home.

The invaders tied it up in the fifth when Vinson was walked and shoved around by one-baggers off the bats of Sullivan and Hillock. They went out front the only time an inning later as Schwab led off with a double, Farnham and Jawish were walked and Vinson singled to left.

But Denikos' odd home run again tied it up, and it took only one more hit for the Vikings to take the lead in the eighth. With two out, Ogle walked Wolfe and Hill and then Chipouris proved his clutch hitting ability by dropping a clean single in left.

Despite his fine record, Weisenberg was in more trouble than his southpaw mound foe. Three times Wilson had the bases loaded when Weisenberg's right-handed slants and Wilson's plate weakness neded the inning. In the fifth Sullivan popped to second base to leave three mates stranded. The same player grounded out under the same conditions in the seventh, and then came Barbee's strike-out in the ninth.

It's a Triple for Denikos—Central Heads Toward Victory

Passeau Gains 8th Victory, Cubs Win, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—Claude Passeau earned his eighth victory of the year and stopped a four-game winning streak for the New York Giants today as the Chicago Cubs triumphed, 6 to 2, on the propulsion of a grand slam homer by Glen Russell in the first inning.

Passeau was touched for eight hits, one more than the Bruins made off four New York hurlers, but the veteran right-hander kept all the Giants in check except Willard Marshall, who made three hits to total 15 hits in his last six games since coming out of a slump.

Tom Sunkel, the southpaw who had beaten the Brooklyn Dodgers twice in his only previous starts this season, walked three men to load the bases in the first inning and Russell, whose first base job is likely to be taken away from him tomorrow by Jimmie Foxx, came through with his second homer in two days to practically win the game at one blow.

Haynes, Edgar Smith Cases Baffle Chisox and Jimmy Dykes

Former Nat 'Going Like House Afire,' While Southpaw Star Drops 8 Games

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—This is a topsy-turvy season for the Chicago White Sox, but nothing that has happened to them has been any more baffling than the contrasting fates of Pitchers Edgar Smith and Joe Haynes.

Last year the chunky, blond Smith was one of the leading southpaws in the American League with an earned run average of 3.18 and a won-lost record of 13 and 17. This year he has started nine games and hasn't won a single one, although getting charged with eight setbacks.

Last year Haynes, goodlooking son-in-law of President Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators (who also is the father-in-law of Boston's Joe Cronin) spent the entire season nursing a sore arm, and for 28 innings' work had a record of 0-0. This year, in only 26 innings, he has won five games without a defeat.

Nobody can explain why the team can't win with one pitcher and can't lose with the other. Both have been pitching good ball, Haynes allowing only one earned run in the last 23 innings. But this hasn't been the secret of his miraculous victories, three of which came within four days last week.

The puny-hitting Sox simply seem to carry a magic charm to the plate when Haynes goes to the mound for one of his relief roles. May 27 he went into the game in the fifth and the Sox scored two runs in the eighth to beat Cleveland, 9 to 7.

This was modest enough showing, but May 29 Chicago came out of a slumber to score four runs in the first half of the eighth inning against the St. Louis Browns, and Haynes went into the game with a one-run deficit. In the ninth the Sox laid on five more runs and won, 12-8.

Then on Memorial Day Haynes was sent to the mound in the seventh and his teammates got him seven runs in the ninth to down Detroit, 12 to 5.

"I guess it's just luck," Haynes suggested today. He said he had neuritis in his right elbow all last season, but that now his arm feels fine.

Knott Hurls And A's Beat Tigers, 5 to 1

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 3.—Jack Knott demonstrated his most effective form of the season for the Philadelphia Athletics today, limiting Detroit to six hits and touching off a batting rally that sewed up a 5 to 1 triumph.

The Tigers got their lone run on a homer by Third Sacker Frank Higgins.

Young Hal White hurled tightly for Detroit until the fifth frame. He led off the inning by beaning Jack Wallaesa, Athletic shortstop, who was carried off the field but later recovered, apparently without ill effect. With a runner on first for Wallaesa, Knott nicked white for a single, followed immediately by one-base blows by Mike Kreevich and Pete Suder, for a total of three runs.

Kreevich got three of the Macks' seven hits and Suder two. Doe Cramer was the lone Tiger to get two blows off Knott.

Navy Holds Early Lead to Win Charles Town Feature Race

1st Victory In 10 Starts; Darby Du 2d

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—After trying nine times this year to win a race and never being worse than fourth, Mrs. E. D. Sowers' Navy finally reached the winner's circle here this afternoon. The 6-year-old son of Annapolis and Chatter Anne took command early and held on to win by two lengths from W. W. Watters' heavily-weighted Darby Du. Six lengths behind the winner came Mrs. Dan Chamblin's Who Reigh to be third in the field of six operating over the 7-furlong course in the Pinkerton Knob Handicap.

The crowd had money for every one of the half-dozen entries and Navy was a lightly played favorite at a $6 mutuel. The winner was clocked in 1:30 3-5 over a heavy track and under a nicely rated ride by Jockey Willis Dufford.

Who Reigh, Light of Morn and Shalleen all had trouble leaving the gate. Navy went to the front in the run to the first turn and opened a three-length advantage turning into the backstretch. Light of Morn made repeated efforts to get to the leader and then weakened. Darby Du, closer than usual in the early stages, made his move on the outside and was carried wide by the tiring Light of Morn.

In the stretch run, Jockey W. Kirk sent Darby Du after Navy but the Washington-owned gelding had too much of a lead and held on under Dufford's handling. Who Reigh closed full of run.

Two heavily played horses figured in a $13.20 payoff in the daily double. In the second race, Vernon Arthur's Real Boy took the top early and stayed there defeating, among others, United Force and Dreaming Time. Palumbo had some trouble with United Force in the early stages. The winner paid $5.60.

Gas Company Net in April Off $77,639

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported April net income of $149,527, as compared with $227,166 in the corresponding month last year.

Operating revenues of $979,844 were $67,766 more than in the same month last year but operating expenses and taxes jumped $121,763. Nonoperating income decreased $19,939 due to the curtailment of merchandising activities because of the war.

The company's net income for the first four months amounted to $813,779, compared with $982,005 for the 1941 period. The reduction of $169,226 was attributed to increased taxes, the provision for which was approximately $171,800 higher in the current year than in 1941.

The report also shows that this year's volume of gas sales is approximately 15 per cent greater than in the first four months of last year. The sales were 7,561,833 M (thousands) cubic feet for the current year to date compared with 6,579,832 M cubic feet for last year. The company expended approximately $131,500 in April and $528,000 in the first four months of this year for extensions to its property in Washington.

Potomac Electric Power Co. was the only one of four Washington utilities to report a gain in April net income.

Cuban Sugar Clears Dividend Arrears

New York, June 3 (AP).—The Cuban American Sugar Co. cleared up arrears today on the old 7 per cent preferred stock with declaration of a $50 dividend payable July 1 to holders of record June 15.

Also payable July 1 to holders of June 15 were a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on old 7 per cent preferred and a dividend of 25 cents on the common, on which the previous payment was 25 cents in January, 1929.

A regular quarterly dividend of $1.37½ on 5½ per cent preferred stock was declared payable September 30 to holders of record September 15.

Holiday Fails to Slow Power Production

New York, June 3 (AP).—Continued operation of war plants on Memorial Day was reflected today in the Edison Electric Institute report that 3,322,651,000 kilowatt hours were produced in the week ended May 30, a less-than-seasonal decline from the previous week.

Maintenance of the high output rate lifted the Associated Press index of power production to a new 1942 high at 159.2 per cent of the 1929-30 average compared with 158.9 a week ago and 144.6 a year ago. The actual drop from the preceding week was 1.7 per cent.

Mexican Pineapples Trucked to Quaker City

Philadelphia, June 3 (AP).—A cargo of 14,000 pineapples—fast becoming a luxury here—was delivered to commission merchants today after being transported 3000 miles from Mexico in a virtually nonstop truck trip.

Commission merchants sponsored the journey because Hawaiian imports have been cut off, transportation from Cuba and Puerto Rico is difficult and shipments by rail from Mexico use railroad equipment needed in the war effort.

Tariff-Free Import Order Is Clarified

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones assured the public yesterday that his new powers to import materials without paying tariff duties "would not affect the price at which such materials are sold in the United States."

After the President signed the order last week, some farm interests were alarmed about the possibility of such tariff-free imports depressing domestic farm prices.

Jones issued a statement saying that all of the materials to be imported under these powers would be used exclusively for war purposes and when sold to manufacturers or processors doing work would be sold at ceiling prices fixed by the Office of Price Administration.

Emphasizing that wool was one of the articles covered by his statement, Jones added, "inasmuch as there is a scarcity of all these materials, their free importation during the emergency should not result in a loss to our domestic producers."

He explained that only purpose of the order lifting the tariff duties was to simplify the bookkeeping and handling of imported war materials, especially the waiver of customs routine which delays loading and unloading of ships and railroad cars.

From the financial standpoint, Jones said, the order makes no real difference since payment of tariff duties by the RFC would be "merely taking the money out of one pocket of the Treasury and putting it in another."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Halting the recent decline which carried cereal prices to lows for the year, the grain futures market today staged a general recovery in every trading pit except corn.

Buying attracted by the low level of prices was the principal support. It came from professionals and consuming interests, although wheat dealers were disappointed in failure of mill and flour trade interest to expand after some buying from this source yesterday.

Hankin Dissents, PUC Permits Pepco Stock Sale to Parent

With Chairman Gregory Hankin dissenting, the Public Utilities Commission handed down a decision yesterday granting the application of the Potomac Electric Power Co. to sell 30,000 shares of common stock to its holding company, the Washington Railway & Electric Co., at $100 a share.

Authority was given without competitive bidding for the stock transfer, and raised again the question of control over these utilities by the giant North American Co.

The opinion states that the proceeds from the sale of the stock shall be used by Pepco for normal working capital requirements and for fixed capital expenditures.

It adds that the application of the power company requesting suspension of the competitive bidding requirements, as outlined by the commission, be granted.

Commission Chairman Hankin in his 5,000 word dissenting opinion, was of the opinion that the sale would constitute a "stock dividend" and as such, is barred by act of Congress.

He states: "If the Washington Railway and Electric Co. is permitted to acquire these 30,000 shares of stock for some three million dollars, then it will be quite possible for it to dispose of these shares at their actual value, namely for 15 million to 18 million dollars, thus transferring some 12 million to 18 million dollars from surplus into profit.

"Witnesses for the companies took the position that so long as there is a consideration paid for the stock, it cannot be regarded as a stock dividend. This is, of course, absurd, because then paragraph 75 of our statute may be circumvented by payment of a nominal consideration for any stock issued, with the result that a stock dividend may be declared under the guise of a sale of stock, which is exactly what the companies are now seeking to do.

"The value of the stock is about $800 and the par value $100, or about 17 per cent of the value. This is not a sale of a share with an incremental value in the form of surplus, with a share of stock attached. It is a 17-inch dog, wagging an 83-inch tail."

Again raising the issue of the North American Co., Chairman Hankin's report continues: "The majority opinion treats the limitation of the scope of the hearing as pertaining only to the proposed financing, and the suspension of the competitive bidding rule, as if a finding that the proposed financing is in the public interest could be determined without considering and wholly disregarding the relationship between the North American Co. and local utilities. I do not think this relationship can be disregarded.

Price of the bonds is 106¾ per cent, plus accrued interest from February 1, 1942, and of the debentures 102 per cent, plus accrued interest from May 1, 1942.

Proceeds of the new issues will be applied to the retirement of all funded debt of the company and the Virginia Public Service Generating Co.

The bonds are redeemable at 111⅛ per cent up to January 31, 1943, and at about ¼ per cent lower premium each year until 1958 and thereafter at progressive smaller premiums. Redemption price is 109 per cent during the 12 months ending January 31, 1950; 107½ per cent during the 12 months ending January 31, 1955; ⅞ per cent during the 12 months ending January 31, 1960; 103¾ per cent during the 12 months ending January 31, 1965; 101½ per cent during 12 months ending January 31, 1970; 100 per cent on and after February 1, 1971.

The debentures are redeemable (otherwise than for the sinking fund) at 104⅞ per cent up to April 30, 1943, and thereafter at about ¼ per cent lower premium each year until May 1, 1957.

Organized in 1926 under the laws of Virginia, the company derived 86.7 per cent of its 1941 consolidated operating revenue from its electric business, 3.7 per cent from gas business and the remainder from coach and railway transportation and other enterprises. In the year 95.8 per cent of electric gross operating revenue was derived from customers in Virginia, 4.2 per cent from West Virginia and a negligible amount from North Carolina.

Proposed Rules For Inventory Control Listed

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—David R. Craig, president of the American Retail Federation, said today that representative retailers had suggested an eight-point formula for inventory control.

More than 300 executives and merchant members of 17 national retail trade associations met to discuss the need for inventory control after indications tha he War Producion Board was considering an order which would restrict inventories.

A survey by the federation, Craig said, showed that retailers felt the following eight principles should form the basis for a formula to be presented to the WPB:

1. The effective date of any program should not be earlier than January 1, 1943.
2. Differentiation between goods with different rates of turnover.
3. Adequate allowance for increased sales in war production areas.
4. Adequate allowance for companies which have expanded their capacity during the past year or so.
5. Additional allowance for those distant from markets.
6. Provision for special seasonal problems of inventory control.
7. Simple administrative requirements.
8. No inventory control on goods which are not scarce.

Craig cited statistics of the Federal Reserve Board showing that department store sales increased 26.9 per cent in March, 1942, and only 8.5 per cent in April, but that stocks as of March this year increased 48 per cent and 59.2 per cent in April over comparable periods in 1941.

Craig said that while May figures were not yet made public, it was known that the inventory accummulations had stopped. He said the general maximum price regulation "had taken the heart and the motive out of retail accumulation."

The accumulations of inventories to their present level and even beyond would be justified by sound business practice in a sellers' market such as we have had for the past six months."

N. J. Sugar Plant To Close July 1

Edgewater, N. J., June 3 (AP).—Prospects that the National Sugar Refining Co.'s big plant at Edgewater would be closed for the duration were confirmed today by Charles D. Bruyn of Englewood, chairman of the board.

He said the tentative date was July 1, with a final decision probable in a few days.

Ship sinkings and diversion to war use have made it impossible to obtain enough raw sugar from the West Indies to keep busy the refineries here and in Long Island City, N. Y.

Newport News Shipyard Billings Rise Sharply

New York, June 3 (AP).—The Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. reported today billings on shipbuilding contracts for the 13 weeks ended March 30 were $37,851,176, compared with $16,441,462 in the corresponding period of 1941.

The company figured that on March 30 the unbilled balance of shipbuilding contracts, including estimated contracts prices for certain naval vessels, amounted to $471,792,961, compared with a ship construction backlog of 433,189,923 on March 31, 1941.

Furniture Trade, Undaunted by Mahogany Ban, Prospering in War Work Centers

New York, June 3.—Cautious couples and young men who prefer to stay home with their parents may be hurting furniture sales in New York but the rest of the country is reported to be doing all right.

"Furniture sales in New York are off," an official of the New York Furniture Merchants Association said today, "but dealers in the war production centers are having a tremendous business."

In those centers, he said, war workers are spending like the proverbial sailor so they and their wives can set up housekeeping in grand style.

But in New York—

"Ah," he said, "New York doesn't have the big war factories, and young, newly married couples, thinking of the draft, aren't buying furniture. They move in with their parents who already have furniture.

"A lot of young men, also thinking of the draft, aren't getting married at all but are just staying home with ther parents."

As an example of the situation in Manhattan, he mentioned one large mid-town furniture house whose New York business is a dribble but which is more than making up for that by enormous sales to war workers in Pennsylvania.

There's a jolt in the cards for fanciers of mahogany furniture but probably they will not feel it for a good while yet.

The War Production Board on May 26 "froze" mahogany supplies in the mills—but only the top grades—and left the manufacturers free to use up supplies on hand.

The Government wants to conserve the good mahogany for use in gliders, airplanes, small boats, instrument cases and as patterns for steel castings.

Mahogany has been imported from South and Central America, Africa and the Philippine Islands. The islands are cut off entirely now and supplies from the other areas depend upon the availability of ships and their success in eluding U.boats.

A representative of the Mahogany Association, Inc., said the unrestricted lower grades of mahogany, which had been used largely in drawer bottoms, could now be used for better purposes.

But a spokesman at the National Retail Furniture Association viewed the ban on mahogany as a chance for native American woods—like birch and cherry—to come into demand. Maple and walnut have always been prime sellers.

"There is no excitement in the trade over the restrictions on mahogany," he said. "Dealers have a good supply of mahogany furniture on hand and the effect of the restrictions certainly should not be felt until after the fall season."

Furniture men said:

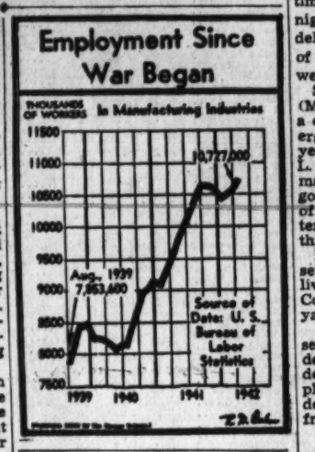
Dealers, thinking that furniture manufacturing might be limited because of the war, have laid in good supplies and their inventories now are about 32 per cent higher than the same time last year, although inventories at the mills are low. Manufacturers' supplies are good, too.

Mahogany in piano manufacturing will not be needed after July 1, when the WPB order for the industry to shut down and convert to war production becomes effective.

Last year 34 manufacturers turned out about 163,000 pianos. Some of them after July will begin making gliders.

Flintkote Dividend Cut

New York, June 3 (AP).—Directors of the Flintkote Co. today declared a dividend of 15 cents on the common stock, payable June 20 to holders of record June 11. In the five preceding quarters 25 cents each was paid.



'Glow' Pigments Developed for Blackout Use

Pittsburgh, June 3 (AP).—Development of improved phosphorescent dyes and pigments which would make a pedestrian's clothes visible in a blackout although they could not be seen from an airplane 2000 feet in the air was described today by Samuel G. Hibben, Westinghouse director of applied lighting.

The light-storing pigments give off a "moonlight glow" for 6 to 10 hours after a 20-minute exposure to light, Hibben said. They are bright enough to stand out in total darkness on signs, markers, persons' clothing and streets to guide traffic and pedestrian movements through blackouts.

"The importance of phosphorescent materials in connection with military operations is also great," Hibben wrote in an engineering review. Uses he suggested were "the painting of hazardous objects, signs and field markers, instrument dials, plastic buttons to mark a route or phosphorescent fabrics for various portions of uniforms."

Credit Accounts Shrink

Apparently because of Federal Reserve Board restrictions on consumer credit, installment debts of customers to furniture, household appliance and jewelry stores all declined from March to April. This indicated that payments on old accounts exceeded new time purchases.

Methodists Open Area Conference

By the Associated Press

Westminister, Md., June 3.—Bishop Adna Wright Leonard of Washington said today at the opening session of the Baltimore annual Methodist Church Conference that issues confronting the world "may change our civilization before delegates meet here again next year."

The conference, which ends Sunday, was opened in alumni hall at Western Maryland College, with Bishop Leonard presiding. Dr. W. F. Wright, pastor of Douglas Memorial Church, Washington, was made secretary, and the Rev. W. W. Patterson of Bethesda Church, Baltimore, the statistician.

Bishop Leonard stressed the need for unity of worship now as never before in the world's history, and said that education and religion now were linked "hand in hand." Cooperation of church and school, he said, was a requirement to meet present issues successfully.

The conference is composed of about 404 ministers, 326 laymen, and 328 pastorates. Conference leaders said they did not expect as large attendance of laymen as in other years before of transportation difficulties.

A roll call of conference ministers who died during the year was read as follows:

William Carroll, June 5, 1941; S. D. Casen, August 13, 1941; Clifton Hays Ray, August 28, 1941; J. E. James, August 31, 1941; Warner P. Thompson, September 15, 1941; Arthur H. Thompson, October 15, 1941; Bert Constance, December 30, 1941; N. T. Johnson, January 11, 1942.

C. C. Archer, February 27, 1942; W. W. Barnes, March 14, 1942, and Henry W. Givler, April 11, 1942.

D. H. McArthur, Long in Politics, Dies Here at 78

Douglas Haight McArthur, active in Democratic politics of North Dakota for many years, died Tuesday night at his home, 120 Willow Avenue, Takoma Park, Md. He was 78.

Mr. McArthur, a pioneer druggist in the Dakota Territory, served for more than 20 years as a Congressional secretary. He retired as secretary to Senator Nye of North Dakota in 1939, after serving in the offices of the late Senator Ladd and Representative Baer, both of the same State.

At the 1912 Democratic convention in Baltimore, Mr. McArthur was manager for John Burke, who received the second largest number of votes for the Vice Presidential nomination. He also served as a member of the State Senate of North Dakota and once ran on the Democratic ticket for Governor of North Dakota.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Amelia H. McArthur; a daughter, Mrs. K. Allen Kent, Kempton, Ind., and son, John B. McArthur, this city.

Peddler Wins $135 in 'Numbers' Game, Can't Buy War Bond

D. C. Police Balk At Accepting 'Tainted' Money

John Chowlis, 58-year-old Greek peddler who has been selling ice cream and candy at Police Headquarters for 12 years, won $135 on a 25-cent numbers game wager and spent two hours yesterday in an unsuccessful effort to buy a $50 defense bond.

Fearing criticism for accepting money obtained from the illegal lottery transaction, Police Department officials refused to sell the almost penniless Chowlis, a naturalized American, either a bond or stamps.

One official said it "may appear that we are condoning the numbers game and we will be criticized. He can buy a bond at a bank or somewhere."

It was then decided that maybe the bond salesman in the Fire Department would take Chowlis' money. Again he was refused and was instructed to apply at the new bond station at Eleventh and G Streets Northwest.

The elderly Greek was practically speechless when it developed that none at Police Hheadquarters where he is well known would accept his money.

Tears came to his eyes and in broken English he asked:

"Don't the United States want my money to help win the war? I don't care who gets it—the Greeks, Americans—just so I can help a litle bit."

Chowlis emphasized the fact the wager was not made in or near Police Headquarters.

He even told the Police Department he would make the Police Relief Association the beneficiary on the bond because he has no dependents. But his money was tainted, at least at Police Headquarters.

John lives at 613 New Jersey Avenue Northwest.

Police Boys Club Holds Model Boat Regatta

With more than 30 entrants, the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club held its annual model boat regatta yesterday at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool. All boats entered in the regatta were built by the boys in the clubs of the organization.

James Robertson, of No. 5 Club, and Morton King, of No. 10, scored first and second in the race for sail boats while Robertson and Charles Currey, of No. 4 Club, were first and second in the sail boat design contest.

All places for events for the rubber-band boat race were won by members of No. 4 Club, Robert Sanbower and Raymond Denikas finishing first and second in the race while Edward Hobbs and Denikas were first and second in design. In the "ocean liner" class, non-propelled models, Robert Lyons and Walter Perry, both of No. 8, won first and second places.

Glen C. Leach, Fish Culture Chief, Dies

Glen Clifton Leach, 69, chief of the Division of Fish Culture, United States Interior Department, since 1918, died yesterday at his home, 5710 First Street Northwest.

Entering the service of the United States, Mr. Leach first was employed in the Postoffice Department in St. Louis, Mo., in August, 1901. The following year he was transferred to the United States Fish Commission and served in the hatcheries at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, and Yes Bay, Alaska. In 1914, he was appointed superintendent of the station at Manchester, Iowa.

Because of his ability, particularly in the mechanical field, Mr. Leach frequently was detailed for special duties at many of the Bureau of Fisheries stations. Many items of technical equipment, including hatching troughs, rearing pounds and other devices now used in modern hatcheries, were designed or improved by him.

In September, 1916, he was appointed field superintendent and two years later became chief of the Division of Fish Culture. He was the author of many articles on the artificial propagation of fish, which have since become standard reference works.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Blanche Seagle Leach; a son, Glen C. Leach, jr., and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Arnette, Topeka, Kans., and Mrs. Gene Cartlidge, Tulsa, Okla.

Home Sought For Senile Needy Here

District health authorities are unanimously agreed that the District is in serious need of a home for the chronically ill and aged persons who are not sufficiently mentally unstable to warrant retention in an insane institution, a report to the commissioners disclosed yesterday.

Those who submitted the report included Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, T. Gilleapie Walsh, chairman of the Commission on Mental Health, Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, and Walter L. Fowler, the budget officer.

A suggestion was recently made to the commissioners by Fowler to ask Congress for a $400,000 allocation from the Lanham Community Defense Housing Act to build a dormitory for the senile on a site near Gallinger Hospital.

According to the report, aged persons with mental disorders should be given mental hospital care only as a last resort, and that hundreds have been committed to St. Elizabeths, who could have been treated in other than a mental institution.

The report adds there is a very definite need at this time in the city for a domiciliary nursing home for the care and treatment of the aged in that condition which required a higher standard of care than can be provided in the Home for the Aged, to be subject to the same provisions of the law which requires the payment for care of patients committed to St. Elizabeths.

It continues that the proportion of older persons admitted to St. Elizabeths is ever increasing, and that the establishment of a domiciliary nursing home could well be the beginning of an Institute of Geriatrics.

legs, but when Criscola missed an attempt to bunt, Early caught Stephens off second for the first out. Criscola followed with a double to left and Hayes was purposely passed to fill the bases. Muncrief grounded toward and with a double in sight, Repass came up emptyhanded, a run scoring.

The next three batters slugged Hudson for hits. Gutteridge singled to right and McQuinn tripled to right, that last blow drove in the sixth run of the inning. When Hudson walked Judnich, Wilson got the pitching job. He disposed of Laabs on a foul pop, but he pitched a double to Stephens then fetched the seventh and eighth runs of the inning home. Eventually 13 Browns went to bat in the session.

One at a Time

The Nats just plodded along. They got a run on three singles in the first inning, with the help of Vernon's stolen base. Early and Repass opened the second inning with walks, but Muncrief limited the damage to a run that scored on Case's double. Early walked and Repass singled to center before anybody was out in the fourth; but the Nats got only one run, that scoring on Pinchhitter Bruce Campbell's single to right. In the sixth, four hits netted the Nats only one run, because of Early's overestimation of his speed. In the seventh, Mickey Vernon beat out an inside-the-park homer to right center and the only other Nat to get on base was Masterson, who singled with two out in the eighth.

The Nats didn't play very well.

Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns squawked loudly after Estalella was given another batting turn in the first inning following a ground out to third base . . . Umpire Art Passarella had called time out before the pitch was delivered, but it didn't make much difference as Estalella popped up to third base on his extra turn . . . The Nats might have had a few more runs save for Criscola's lunging catch of Spence's fly with two on in the sixth.

Stephens got a single in the second inning by banging the ball between the bowlegs of Estalella, which is no great feat.

Bombers flying from the United States to England these days are carrying not only implements of war but also evidences of the cultural amity existing between the two countries.

For some of the big warplanes are taking to the British Broadcasting Corporation packages containing records of the British-American festival programs which have been heard over the Columbia network Friday afternoons of late.

The records, performed by the Columbia Concert Orchestra, must be wrapped with special care inasmuch as they are made of glass these days and are extremely susceptible to breakage at the high altitudes and in the zero and subzero temperatures in which the bombers fly.

So far as is known, however, all the British-American Festival records already sent have reached their destination in good condition.

The B. B. C. has been assembling and selecting the records for a series on its Home Service. The first program of the series is scheduled for Sunday, June 7, from 1:30 to 1:55 p. m., English War Time.

The programs, made up of classic and contemporary works by British and American composers, arrive in England at a particularly fortunate time, it turns out, since a survey recently conducted there shows that symphonic music is in greater demand than ever before.

Contract Bridge

A contributor reports that today's hand was played at a local duplicate game at contracts of six and seven spades, but not one declarer managed to take thirteen tricks at either bid.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ A Q 9 8 ♡ A J 7 ◇ A K Q 10 4 ♣ 5
WEST: ♠ J 6 2 ♡ 9 6 5 ◇ J 9 8 7 5 ♣ Q 3
EAST: ♠ 7 4 ♡ K Q 4 3 ◇ 6 3 2 ♣ J 9 6 2
SOUTH: ♠ K 10 5 3 ♡ 10 8 2 ◇ none ♣ A K 10 8 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
5 NT	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♡

Yet thirteen tricks can be won. It seems that most declarers—some played it North and some from the South seat—drew thre rounds of trumps and tried to break the adverse clubs 3-3. When this failed, they had no more spades left with which to trump clubs, and so had to give up a trick to the opponents.

A cross-ruff will win the hand, trumping two clubs in the North hand and hearts and diamonds in the South. Declarer will win two clubs, three diamonds, one heart and seven spades—three in one hand four in the other.

The king of hearts is opened and won by the ace; the ace, king, queen of diamonds dispose of dummy's losing hearts and a club. Now a heart is ruffed: a low spade is returned to North's ace, and another heart ruffed.

The ace, king of clubs are cashed, and a low club is trumped by North. A diamond is ruffed by South's king of spades, and declarer's queen, nine of trumps are a tenace over West's guarded jack. This line of play, of course, requires guessing the location of the spade jack but otherwise is not illogical. Moreover, at the end declarer can "count" out West's hand and, knowing that West has two spades and East one, will probably assume the jack is with the hand having the greater number.
